Every cranny overflows with garbage in this apartment

Garbage hobby kept her in dumps

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some people collect stamps, others collect coins or baseball cards.

But a 30-year-old Vancouver woman had a different hobby. She collected garbage and stored it in her one-bedroom apartment.

The woman, described by neighbors as friendly and courteous, vacated her apartment before March, 1980, without giving notice, leaving behind 140 to 180 cubic metres of garbage.

The garbage, mostly in plastic bags of assorted sizes and colors, is piled almost two metres high in some parts of the 70-square-metre apartment.

Every nook, cranny and shelf is loaded with refuse. In the kitchen, garbage is waist high and the refrigerator is iced shut. Every cupboard is crammed with junk.

Garbage covers the furniture in the living room and bedrooms. The property manager says a television, sofa and a table or two are "under all that."

There also are unopened parcels and letters. One, sent by the former tenant to herself from the U.S., contains empty soft drink containers, according to the customs label.

She even abandoned an old car in the basement of the 52-unit apartment house. The car will be towed away to a storage compound and held for 90 days. If it isn't claimed it will be sold and applied to the costs of cleaning the apartment.

Ron Harvie, property manager for the Rental Housing Council of B.C., says he's never seen anything like it before.

"It's quite unbelievable as you take a look at this place," he says, standing on a one-metre stack of newspapers in the apartment's small hallway.

It will take four or five trips to the city dump to empty the apartment, says Ken Malaniuk, manager of Superior Sanitation Services, the company hired to do the cleanup.

"It will cost upwards of $3,000 by the time we clear this stuff out, store what furniture there is, and make it habitable again," he says.

Every bag will be opened and checked for valuables, Harvie says.

The garbage, most of it clean though musty smelling, has brought rodents into the suite and the rest of the building.

"We'll have to fumigate the entire building and keep a check on it for some time to come," says Harvie.

The woman tenant had a respectable job in Vancouver but left the apartment, in which she had lived since 1973, and headed for the United States sometime before March, says Harvie.

She was contacted by the housing council when the March rent was not paid, Harvie says, and because of the condition of the suite was given notice to vacate.

The suite now is closed by the fire department as a fire hazard.

Iraqi assassins stalk Ghotbzadeh

Times News Services

KUWAIT — A hail of bullets fired from at least two cars hit a motorcade carrying Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh today, but no one was hurt, the Kuwait news agency reported.

Iran blamed Iraq for what it described as an abortive assassination attempt.

Meanwhile, Tehran radio said two U.S. fighter planes fired on an Iranian patrol aircraft over the Gulf of Oman today but were chased off by Iranian fighters. The U.S. said two F-14 fighters intercepted an Iranian transport plane over the strategic Straits of Hormuz and escorted it back to Iranian air space, but did not fire on it.

It was also reported that Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr has asked Cuban President Fidel Castro to convene an extraordinary meeting of nonaligned countries to deal with the latest American "aggression" against Iran.

The Kuwait interior ministry said police located two cars used in today's attack on Ghotbzadeh, but made no mention of any arrests. It said the cars were filled with weapons and explosives.

The official Iranian Pars news agency said the second car was found outside the Iraqi embassy in Kuwait and said "the passengers of the car left the vehicle and entered the Iraqi embassy there."

Pars said one Kuwaiti security agent was slightly wounded in the attack. It also said police had picked up two suspects and recovered 20 guns and that Kuwait had closed its airport and borders.

As the Tehran hostage crisis neared the end of its sixth month, Ghotbzadeh was visiting several Middle East countries in an attempt to improve the Iranian revolutionary regime's relations with Arab governments.

The governments of Kuwait and the other monarchies of the Arabian Peninsula as well as Iraq's socialist government are all worried by the attempts of Iran's revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini and his associates to export their Islamic revolution.

Reacting to the Iranian version of the fighter plane incident, U.S. officials said what they termed a "routine intercept" occurred when an Iranian C-130 flew within 50 nautical miles of the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz, on patrol in the

Muskie tipped as successor to Vance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today said he will nominate Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine to succeed Cyrus Vance as U.S. state secretary, congressional sources said.

Muskie, 66, was Hubert Humphrey's vice-presidential running mate in 1968 and lost his own bid for the presidency in 1972.

BCRIC earnings $13.5M

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Resources Investment Corp. has reported consolidated net earnings in the first three months of 1980 of $13.5 million — more than double net earnings of $6.1 million in the first quarter of last year.

BCRIC president David Helliwell said Monday, however, that the figures are not directly comparable because the company in the first quarter last year was a tax-exempt government-owned corporation and had not received funds from its public share issue.

The corporation said in a news release that total revenues in the first quarter this year were $110.4 million, compared with $72.6 million in the corresponding period of 1979.

Helliwell also said that BCRIC won't exercise an option to purchase a 25-percent interest in Kaiser Resources Ltd. because BCRIC negotiated the option with a view to obtaining a direct participation in the coal industry that would fit in with its plans to achieve operating-company status.

The option proposal, announced early in March, had been criticized widely and some market observers thought it to be largely responsible for a sharp decline in the value of BCRIC shares in recent weeks.

On the Vancouver Stock Exchange today, B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led the industrials, gaining .20 to $6½ on a volume of 35,321 shares.

Did taxpayers foot bill for Socred poll? — NDP

By JAKE BANKY

The NDP refuses to believe Socred assurances that a government payment of $2,500 to a prominent polling firm had nothing to do with politics and was a legitimate government expense.

The payment was made to Goldfarb Consultants of Toronto for work done in August and September of 1978 and the invoice appears in the recently-released 1978-79 public accounts.

Attached to the invoice was a note from a member of the comptroller-general's staff which states:

"We lack sufficient detail to properly audit this account. I refer this for info since this area is politically sensitive."

Another notation said the work was of a confidential nature and further information could be had from David Brown, then communications planning adviser in Premier Bill Bennett's office.

Goldfarb did a total of $259,630 worth of work for the provincial government in 1978-79 but the opposition picked on this specific invoice because of the references to it being politically sensitive and involving confidential matters.

The time of the invoice coincides approximately with a Goldfarb poll conducted for the Socreds to help them decide whether to call an election that fall.

The poll results were disappointing and the election was put off until the following spring.

As the 17th day of debate on the premier's estimates opened Monday, the opposition demanded to know the nature of the work covered by the invoice.

Most questioners steered clear of making accusations.

NDP leader Dave Barrett suggested it might have covered work done in preparation for a poll.

But his colleague, Eileen Dailly, flatly called it a question of political morality and charged the Bennett government with using public money to finance a political poll.

Bennett denied any misuse of government funds for political purposes and

$5M fire guts Creston high school

CRESTON (CP) — Insurance officials estimate damage at $5 million in an overnight fire which destroyed most of a high school in this west Kootenays city.

Prince Charles secondary was levelled, except for an industrial shop area which was badly charred. Officials said the fire is believed to have started in the home economics section of the school. About 1,000 students attended the school.

Alfred Hitchcock dies

Times News Services

HITCHCOCK

LOS ANGELES — Film director Alfred Hitchcock, the rotund master of suspense who successfully mixed murder with laughter and gore, died this morning at his Los Angeles home. He was 80.

Hitchcock's agent, Herman Citron, said he had received the news in a telephone call from Sir Alfred's daughter, Patricia O'Connell, in Los Angeles, where Sir Alfred lived.

Citron said he did not know any of the the details surrounding the death of the man whose 60 films included such hits as Psycho.

Other sources reported the movie giant died at 9:17 a.m. of natural causes — and that, in addition to his daughter, his wife, Alma, and his three grandchildren were at his side.

Sir Alfred, who was born in Leytonstone, Eng., had a heart condition and suffered painful bouts of arthritis in recent years, forcing him to use a wheelchair or crutches.

Trustees back broader sex education program

By AB KENT

A sex education program that goes beyond the popular concept of instruction and counselling was endorsed Monday by Greater Victoria school trustees.

After lengthy discussion the board passed Trustee Mark Fisher's motion directing the administrators to draw up a package of course material aimed at Grades 8-11 dealing with human sexuality.

The proposal expands by one year the grades now given a limited amounted of instruction.

It also requires trustees, parents, teachers and the education ministry to contribute to development of the course material.

Only Trustee Lavinia Greenwood opposed the motion, although Trustee Win Mott attempted to alter it by extensive amendment which changed the intent and was then refused by chairman Carol Pickup. Trustee Peter Yorke was absent.

Fisher said earlier he was concerned about the rate of teenaged pregnancy which he suggested constitutes a major public health problem, not to mention a serious factor in emotional and psychological well-being of girls who deliver, miscarry or are aborted.

He said his proposal was not intended to be pro-life or pro-abortion, but to make available a continuity of information, "to provide children with a much better idea of themselves, of puberty and sexuality."

Fisher was especially concerned about male students, the forgotten ones when attention focuses on a pregnant girl.

"Sexuality involves responsibility," he said.

The material would not have cultural or religious connotations, "just an intelligent learning process to arm them to deal with the problems of this age."

He added it might include birth control.

A child who asks a teacher a question or who has problem dealing with sexuality should not have to be referred to a counsellor or the family life teacher with whom he may not feel free to discuss it. The teacher should be able to handle it straightaway, Fisher suggested.

Mott said his amendment would take into account some of the family life education going on now in the district and request a report on what further resources would be needed to improve the curriculum.

Fisher said the amendment was a complete distortion of the motion and urged trustees to vote against the motion if they didn't like it the way it was.

Pickup asked administrators what is done in the area at present.

The district employs two teachers who give from two to three hours a year instruction to classes in Grades 8-10. The ministry is seeking a consultant on health, guidance and physical education, which it is felt is not well done in the district.

In addition, trustees were told, a subcommittee to a ministerial youth committee is looking into teenaged pregnancies.

Fisher said it is absurd to think that two teachers making themselves available to students for a few hours a year could be a successful program.

Trustees have failed, he said, if teachers are not

MP blasts Sen. Perrault for butting in

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Ray Perrault, one of three senators in the cabinet, is using taxpayers' money for partisan activities in British Columbia and interfering with the work of elected MPs, a New Democratic Party MP said Monday.

Jim Fulton, who represents Skeena riding in northwestern B.C., demanded in the Commons that Perrault "confine his activities to those normally reserved for members of the upper chamber" and that the government release each month the expenses of the senator and his staff.

Fulton said outside the Commons that Perrault, government House leader in the Senate and the only B.C. representative in the cabinet, has hired a partisan staff and is trying to gain credit for the work of other ministers while usurping the role of elected MPs.

It is not unusual for cabinet ministers to hire a partisan staff but Perrault has "no electoral responsibility" and perhaps has overstepped the rights of a senator, he suggested.

Fulton referred to a recent news release on aid from the department of regional economic expansion to a lumber mill in McBride, B.C., which says Perrault made the announcement on behalf of Pierre De Bane, minister responsible for the department.

Fulton said major announcements should be made by the cabinet minister involved.

"But I think if the minister is not making it, either someone from his department or the local MP should make it.

"Rather than have constituents deal with their elected representatives, the Liberals are trying to give the impression there is an alternative."

Perrault also has made statements on the proposed grain terminal at Prince Rupert in Fulton's riding, sometimes contradicting what Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin has said, the MP added.

Perrault, who was appointed to the cabinet after the Liberals were shut out in B.C. in the Feb. 18 election, was in Vancouver and could not be reached for comment.

Jackpot winner collects again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A persistent gambler who recently won the world's largest jackpot in Reno has taken a one-armed bandit for at least another $44,000.

Bill Ragland, who won $314,741 at Harold's Casino on April 8, collected $12,000 Monday after earlier wins of $24,000 and $8,000 during 17 days of continuous play at a slot machine at Binion's Horseshoe Casino, owner Ted Binion said.

The Fresno, Calif., man, his sister and daughter took turns playing the same slot machine "continuously, 24 hours a day," casino publicist Lynn White said.

"Crazy people," she said. "They look like hell."

They walked into the casino two weeks ago with $100, she said, and just kept playing their winnings.

Lava eruption fears raised

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A 1½-kilometre-wide slab on the north face of Mount St. Helens has bulged five to eight metres in a few days, increasing the odds of devastating avalanches from the volcano, scientists say.

And while scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey are cautious about interpreting measurements taken in the last few days, they add that the recent changes also may forecast a violent lava eruption.

Meanwhile, seismologists at the University of Washington reported the mountain was again shaken by strong quakes and state officials in Olympia considered closing areas near the southwest Washington peak to property owners.

Bob Christiansen, a geophysicist from the geological survey, said Monday the slab around the Goat Rock area near the 2,285-metre level of the 2,950-metre peak has moved 60 metres to the north-northwest in the last year.

"As much as 15 to 25 feet of displacement has occurred between Thursday and Sunday," he said.

Besides the bulging, Christiansen said instruments have recorded increasing tilt to the north or northwest during the last several days.

Bulging and tilting shows that the rock "is unstable and moving outwards," said volcanologist David Johnson.

Temple defaced

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Prince George Sikh Association has offered a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction of vandals who have defaced their temple with racist slogans.

"This act is a violation of our religious and cultural freedoms and we're not going to put up with this any longer," Charanjit Singh Sandhu, president of the 1,500-member association, said Monday.

The racial slurs and obscenities were painted on all sides of the temple by vandals using bright green and pink spray paint.

Sandhu said the association has complained to the RCMP 10 times during the year about other acts of vandalism but police have done nothing.

He said the temple's windows and fences have been broken, cars in the parking lot were smashed and the symbol on top of the building was taken off.

Agents and criminals among Cuban exiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI Director William Webster says bureau agents have discovered a small number of intelligence agents, criminals and prostitutes among the Cuban refugees flooding into Florida.

Webster, in an interview with the Washington Post Monday, said a team of FBI agents has been screening the refugees who were offered a chance to flee Cuba in the past week by Fidel Castro.

Asked if there were any intelligence operatives among the more than 3,000 confirmed arrivals so far on a flotilla of refugee boats, Webster said, "So far, it's been pretty small, but we have confirmed some."

He also was quoted as saying Castro "appears to be pre-empting a certain percentage of the available seats on those boats for people he doesn't want in Cuba anymore."

Verne Jervis, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, told UPI he knew of about a dozen Cubans "being held in the Federal Corrections Institute in Florida."

"They are people who would appear to be excludable under immigration laws, either because of criminal convictions or prostitution," Jervis said. But he said he knew of no spies or terrorists being held at the prison.

Webster was quoted as saying FBI agents, who are working with other intelligence agencies in screening the new arrivals, "have certain profiles we're looking for."

Meanwhile, in the calm following a storm, 50 small boats left today for Cuba, resuming the Freedom Flotilla that has brought about 3,500 refugees to the United States in the past week.

Despite the deaths of two exiles during a small hurricane Sunday, boat captains took advantage of the break in the weather and set out on the 145-kilometres journey across the treacherous Florida Straits to the Cuban port of Mariel.

One captain said the boaters planned to stay together to prevent a repeat of Sunday's havoc that saw boats scattered through the straits and the Coast Guard deluged with distress calls.

Meanwhile, Radio Havana, quoting the Communist Party newspaper Granma, said more than 1,700 boats were in Mariel harbor, waiting for the break in the weather to load refugees.

The broadcast, monitored in Miami, said no boats had were allowed to leave the harbor during the stormy weather conditions.

On Monday, Florida Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency in counties struggling to handle the influx of refugees.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service dispatched 100 more border patrol agents to deal with the sealift and customs agents seized three shrimp boats Monday, imposing heavy fines on the owners who brought 507 illegal aliens into the United States.

For the first time since the ragtag boatlift began eight days ago, there were no arrivals from Cuba on Monday following a storm with hurricane-force winds that pummelled the 145-kilometre straits between Florida and Cuba.

Despite choppy seas, however, about 100 small craft put out for the Cuban port of Mariel to join 1,500 boats already waiting to take on refugees. The weather was expected to improve today.

Walkout cuts liquor and beer shipments

VANCOUVER (CP) — Beer and liquor shipments destined for various B.C. liquor outlets, restaurants and pubs were halted temporarily Monday by a surprise walkout of more than 200 employees of the province's central liquor distribution branch.

It was the second walkout in as many weeks by members of the B.C. Government Employees Union protesting the use of non-union contractors for work at the warehouse.

Operations returned to normal when afternoon shift employees arrived for work.

Union spokesman Jack Adams said government officials say the non-union contract work is government policy.

Union officials refused to say if further walkouts will occur.

3 major banks cut mortgage interest rates

TORONTO (CP) — Three of Canada's major banks announced Monday reductions in their mortgage rates, effective today.

The reductions, in response to declining costs of borrowing in money markets, varied among the banks and mortgage rates among the Big Five banks now differ by as much as three-quarters of one per cent.

The Toronto Dominion Bank said it cut its one-year rate to 15.75 per cent from 16.25 per cent and its three-year rate to 16 per cent from 16.5 per cent.

The renewal rate for five-year mortgages has been reduced to 16.75 per cent from 17 per cent. The Toronto Dominion Bank is not taking new five-year mortgages.

Bank spokesman Arnold Agnew said it is not possible to say whether mortgage rates will hold or continue to decline.

"It is going to be rather fluid for a while," he said. "A lot of external forces are at work."

The Royal Bank of Canada said its one-year mortgage rate remains unchanged at 16 per cent but its three-year rate has dropped to 16.5 per cent from 17.5 per cent and the five-year rate to 16.75 per cent from 17.75 per cent.

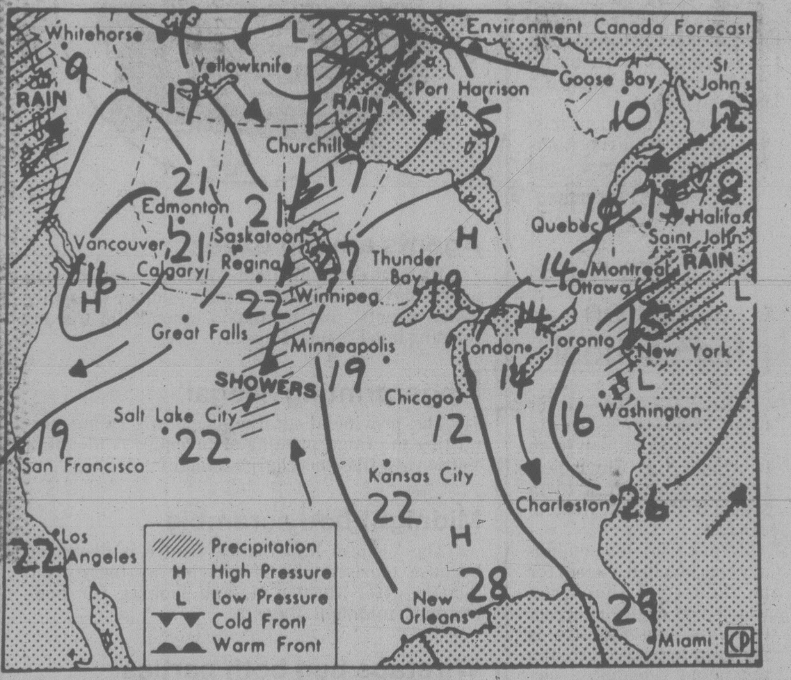
The Bank of Montreal has lowered its rate for mortgages of one, two and three years to 15.75 per cent. Previous rates were 16.25 per cent for one year, 16.5 per cent for two years and 17 per cent for three years.

The five-year rate has been cut by 1.5 per cent to 16 per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia announced last Wednesday it had lowered its one- and three-year rates to 15.75 per cent and its five-year rate to 16 per cent.

The latter rate is the lowest among the major banks for five-year mortgages. A spokesman said the rates are constantly under review.

A spokesman for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said rate changes are under consideration but for the moment, the rates stand at 16.25 per cent for new one- and three-year mortgages, with a reduction of one-half of one per cent for renewals, and 16.75 per cent for five years.



Cloud that covered the Georgia Strait area overnight is rapidly thinning and moving east as a ridge of high pressure builds in from the west. The gradual clearing trend is forecast to continue across the south as the ridge continues to press eastwards. However at the same time a disturbance crossing the northeast Pacific spread cloud and more rain to the north and central coasts later today. The ragged southern cloud edge of this disturbance will at times poke down into southern regions as well.

said information on the invoice must wait for the estimates of Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe, Brown's new boss.

Wolfe, however, called reporters together to explain that the invoice was for consultation on evaluating government information programs.

"There is no political aspect to this," said Wolfe.

He suggested the civil servant who was worried about political sensitivity was probably confused by Goldfarb's reputation as a pollster.

Brown offered the same explanation.

"It's a personal reaction by one bureaucrat. He saw 'Goldfarb' and he immediately thought 'poll'."

Although he could not recall specifically the work covered by the $2,500 invoice, he said it was connected to research on government communications.

"There is absolutely no truth to the inference that it had anything to do with polling or politics."

Asbestos products banned

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government has banned building construction products containing asbestos fibres, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet announced today.

"Inhalation of asbestos fibre has been shown to be a human health hazard which can result in cancer, and the ban is in line with our policy to reduce unnecessary exposure to airborne asbestos," Ouellet said.

The ban, enforced under the Hazardous Products Act, prohibits the importation, advertisement and sale of drywall joint cements and patching and spackling compounds that contain asbestos fibre.

The new legislation also applies to asbestos-based artificial ash manufactured for use in sand-pan gas fireplaces.

Existing joint cements and patching compounds in buildings are not dangerous.

Government officials and representatives from industry consulted several times while the legislation was being drafted.

"Prior to the ban very few of the products in the marketplace contained asbestos, as manufacturers in general modified their formulations to remove asbestos fibre," Ouellet said.

Departmental officials will monitor manufacturers to ensure the act is honored.

"In this way, Canadians will be able to purchase or use products for construction, renovation and home repair that will not give rise to airborne asbestos fibres during installation or later alterations," he said.

Ouellet urged consumers to throw out artificial ash that is two years old. Older material may release asbestos if disturbed.

It's just peachy out in the boonies!

VANCOUVER — As an ex-officio officer of the Ottawa Tourist Board, one of the duties — an unpleasant one — assigned to me is to deliver regular reports from the boondocks, the frontier, the land where seldom is heard a civil servant word and the skies are not cloudy all day.

I am forced to report that the Japanese cherry blossoms have practically disappeared, the residential streets no longer resembling paths of pink popcorn.

They have been replaced by the white explosion of the dogwood and every parked auto runs the risk of inadvertantly appearing like the third lead car in the getaway from a wedding.

In Lethbridge, I am saddened to report, there are almost no taxis. You can always tell a town where everyone is stinking rich. There are no taxis. Everyone rides around in big cars larger than Jean Luc Pepin's ego.

There are, in Ottawa, plenty of taxis. The only problem is in finding a clean one.

In fact, Ottawa, though I haven't had time to check this out, there are apparently as many taxis in Lethbridge as there are Liberals in Alberta.

In Winnipeg it was 95 degrees one day. That's on our other official thermometer.

Though they're still playing hockey in Winnipeg. A benefit game for Billy Heindel, a former member of the national team who is paralysed after jumping off a bridge in a suicide attempt, drew Bobby Orr, Wayne Gretzky, and Ken Dryden.

Dryden, who got his lawyer's ticket the other day along with Maureen McTeer, says he has no intention of practising law, but will write a book. Eventual aim, one suspects, is politics. He could stonewall better than Allan MacEachen and he's better-looking than Eugene Whalen.

In Calgary, Ottawa, the rush hour starts at 6:30 A.M. People work harder here, Ottawa.

In Brandon, there are ladies who look as if they escaped from the pages of Harper's Bazaar. This plays hell with the Ottawa view of the boonies, Ottawa.

In Calgary, you can't get a reservation at any of the four leading hotels. Nothing special. Just business as usual, minting money.

People don't stay out late in Calgary. Have to get their beauty sleep so they can get up early in the morning to catch the 6:30 A.M. traffic rush so they can make some money.

People in the boonies are still doubled over, Ottawa, laughing at the charitable Liberal offer to have backbench MPs from Quebec and Ontario "twin" the unfortunate Western Canadian ridings that were so unfortunate as not to have a Liberal representing them after Feb. 18.

People are laughing so hard that it probably ensures that the Liberals won't be back in Western Canada until 1998, when Pierre Trudeau's term will end.

Here in The Village on the Edge of the Rain Forest, children were swimming Sunday off the Spanish Banks while gazing off at the peaks of Whistler Mountain, where MGM is spending $100 million to build an Aspen-style, world-class ski resort (that means you bring your own hash.) People don't work very hard here, Ottawa.

In Lethbridge, architect Arthur Erickson has built what is probably the most spectacular university in Canada, a lean concrete slit trench built into the bank of the Old Man River, resembling for all the world a fortress buried in a Moroccan cliff.

There is nothing but tears here, Ottawa, in the boonies, over the fate of the only Canadian team left in the shinny championships. With the Minnesota No-Stars proceeding onward and Guy Lafleur left behind, it means Claude Ryan is the only thing we got to root for, and we're worried about his stick-handling.

Mr. Trudeau is in Vancouver next week, Ottawa, hosting Prime Minister Ohira of Japan and the hopes of him winning any Liberal brownie points is given about the same chances as Jimmy Carter's expedition in the desert.

Mr. Pepin, Mr. Trudeau's inspired choice as transport minister, has shown a remarkable gift. He managed, in one fell swoop, the difficult task of allienating all the Prairie provinces and B.C. too.

He managed this parlay by hinting the Liberals were about to waffle on the Joe Clark pledge, to finally put some money into the northern B.C. port of Prince Rupert, thereby unclogging the railway jam of wheat, potash and coal exports all squeezing through the same mountain passes on the way to Vancouver.

Of course, Mr. Pepin may still believe Mr. Trudeau is going to double-track the railways from Winnipeg to the coast.

They still laugh a lot about that one too, Ottawa.

Those are all the news, Ottawa. Keep in touch.

Summer start likely on port for Rupert

VANCOUVER (CP) — Construction of new port facilities at Prince Rupert should begin this summer after federal and grain company officials sign an agreement in May, Senator Ray Perrault said Monday.

Perrault, denying accusations by the four Western premiers that the federal government is backing out on a $42.5-million commitment to provide facilities for the new terminal, said he wants the development to go ahead without delay.

"I hope we can arrange for cynics an invitation to the sod-turning," said Perrault, government leader in the Senate and B.C.'s representative in the Liberal cabinet.

A dispute over the federal commitment began several weeks ago when Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said the government would build a $13.8-million wharf and then recover costs from a consortium of seven grain companies supporting the project.

Some local officials said that was a reversal of the former Progressive Conservative government's pledge to pay the full cost of the wharf.

But Perrault said Monday it was implicit in the agreement reached between the PC government and the consortium that the National Harbors Board, a federal agency, would build the wharf and recover costs.

"In no case was it stated the taxpayer would have to pick up the tab," Perrault told a news conference.

Perrault said the federal government will spend another $20 million on the project on a non-recoverable basis.

Winery offer rejected

SURREY (CP) — Striking employees of Ste. Michelle Wines have rejected a company wage proposal offering them $2.45 an hour over two years, a union spokesman said Monday.

John Langley of the Brewery and Soft Drink Workers, Local 300, said the strikers voted down the offer because it would not provide wage parity in the first year with employees of Andres Wines in nearby Port Moody.

The offer would have raised the Ste. Michelle wage rate to $9.49 an hour in the first year, compared with $10.17 at Andres, he said.

The Ste. Michelle rate in the second year would be temporarily higher than at Andres, he said, but the Andres workers would be negotiating a new wage increase for themselves at that time.

Ken Hewitt-White at controls of the planetarium laser show

Despite patent suits, the show flashes on

VANCOUVER (CP) — The H. R. MacMillan Planetarium, popular among young people for its rock music, light and laser shows, is caught in the middle of a patent battle between two American laser companies.

The legal wrangling, however, has not stopped work on the planetarium's latest rock-light production, Pink Floyd Skylights.

The planetarium uses a laser projection system to create a kaleidoscope of color which is projected onto its theatre dome. The laser imagery and other lighting effects are choreographed with recorded music.

The laser system was purchased from Laser Presentations, of Columbus, Ohio. However, a second company, Laser Images, of Van Nuys, Calif., says the use of the system violates a Canadian patent it has had for several years.

Planetarium director David Rodger says the patent "stinks to high heaven," is restrictive and the planetarium will fight any attempt to put it out of show business.

Rock-light shows have become a lucrative feature of planetarium programming since Ken Hewitt-White, Allan Miller, John Tanner and Craig McCaw combined their musical and astronomy talents four years ago to form Roundhouse Productions.

Their presentation of Pink Floyd Skylights is expected to draw more than 30,000 viewers over the next four to five months.

The show includes 55 minutes of Pink Floyd music and visual impact achieved by a combination of lighting effects, Hewitt-White said in a recent interview.

Juvenile prints raise a ruckus

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Kelowna, B.C. law firm is challenging a directive of the provincial attorney-general's ministry permitting the fingerprinting of juveniles.

The firm has advised the ministry it believes the directive counsels illegal activity because fingerprinting juveniles already has been ruled illegal by the highest court in the province.

And it has warned it will take further legal steps to settle the issue unless the ministry takes action.

"We want to raise some dust," said lawyer Tony Peyton. "And when it's settled we'll see if we need to bring civil or criminal charges."

The issue revolves around a 16-year-old Kelowna boy arrested by RCMP last month for auto theft.

When police told him they were going to fingerprint him he objected and, on legal advice, offered token resistance so that police had to carry him to the printing room, Peyton said.

Prior to the fingerprinting, the boy's legal aid lawyer told police and Crown counsel that fingerprinting was illegal and quoted a B.C. Court of Appeal decision made in March, 1978.

In that ruling, Mr. Justice Angelo Branca said fingerprinting a juvenile reeks of unfairness and injustice to the child. However, while he and two other appeal judges said such fingerprinting is illegal, they allowed the prints to be used as evidence.

Peyton said RCMP and Kelowna Crown counsel agreed that Branca's ruling had been made, but said they were taking prints on the authority of a policy directive issued by the attorney-general's ministry.

The day after the Branca judgment, Neil McDiarmid, B.C.'s director of criminal law, said he had issued a directive approving fingerprinting the previous year and that it still stood.

Now Peyton and his partner Gregory McDade are challenging the right of the attorney-general's department to make such directives.

Hooker violence denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 16-year-old girl suspected of prostitution in the city's West End testified Monday in family court that police accounts of violence between rival groups of pimps and hookers street is mostly wrong.

She was in court as a witness in a case brought by city police against the superintendent of child welfare for failing to take adequate care of the girl, who is a ward of the superintendent until August.

The girl — who said she has worked the area for more than a year — said that in the rare instances when fights were brewing, she could simply stay away from them.

Under questioning from the lawyer appointed to her by the court, Jamie Martin, she said she felt safe on the street "even from tricks (customers)," but recounted two experiences when she was roughed up and was glad to escape.

She said she has a good relationship with the police who patrol the area, and relies upon them if she gets in trouble.

Misplaced trust

The sordid list of deficiencies listed by the one-man federal inquiry into the standards of health care at Alert Bay will surely give government health authorities the ammunition they need to correct the situation.

Inquiry commissioner Gary Goldthorpe has also raised serious questions about the ability of the B.C. College of Physicans and Surgeons to investigate the conduct of its members. Goldthorpe found the college acted inadequately in dealing with written complaints received about the drinking habits of the community's only doctor.

The college is endowed with a public trust to ensure that the province's doctors maintain the highest levels of professional conduct and competence. It is the college which, on behalf of the government and B.C. residents, has the power to license and discipline doctors. In the case of Alert Bay that trust has been inadequately met.

Last July, the college's executive committee found that the Alert Bay doctor, Jack Pickup, was competent and demonstrated not only a satisfactory background of knowledge but also more than adequate skills in diagnosis and management. This review followed a coroner's inquest into the death of an 11-year-old Nimpkish Indian girl. The jury found Pickup negligent in the death for failing to apply adequate medical care and procedures.

The college endorsed Pickup without hearing witnesses or complaints and without studying the transcript of the 11-day inquest. This outraged the community and prompted demands for the federal inquiry.

Goldthorpe found that Pickup possesses at least the minimum level skill and knowledge to practise medicine in B.C. But he also found that Pickup was an alcoholic in need of treatment. "Dr. Pickup has been on many occasions clearly and obviously drunk while performing as a doctor in St. George's Hospital."

The commissioner recommended that the college set up its own inquiry to determine Pickup's conduct and fitness. It is something, he says, that should have been done months ago. In examining the competence and conduct of a doctor, a question and answer session on medical knowledge is clearly not enough.

Goldthorpe has charged that the college is more concerned with protecting physicians under criticism than it is with protecting the public. Such an allegation, if true, has far reaching implications for all B.C. citizens. The College must re-open its Alert Bay file to demonstrate that the public's trust has not been misplaced.

It was too risky

U.S. President Jimmy Carter took a big gamble last week when he gave the order for a military rescue mission to try to free the 50 hostages held for more than five months in the U.S. embassy compound in Tehran.

He lost.

Although Carter appears to have gained slightly in the national popularity polls because of his action, the longer-term results of the abortive raid will probably do more harm to the U.S. position than the short-term results have benefitted the president's quest for re-election.

One of those long-term effects became apparent Monday when Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — the man mainly responsible for U.S. foreign policy — resigned because he could not support the rescue mission.

In the three years since he took office, Vance has built a good reputation both with U.S. allies in Western Europe and even with the Soviets. He has been seen as the cautious diplomat, preferring negotiation to confrontation. His work on a variety of foreign policy issues will doubtless be much missed by Carter.

The raid's effects on U.S.-Iranian relations are also already becoming apparent. They will, it seems certain, be negative. It has hardened the position of the religious extremists and reduced the influence of the more moderate members of the Iranian cabinet — the ones who might have been able to negotiate a peaceful solution to the hostage affair.

The hostages have been separated and moved to different cities. It will not be possible for the U.S. to attempt another similar mission. It should be noted that at no time has there been any indication that the hostages have been physically harmed. Now their position may be jeopardized.

It appears that Vance was right in the first place. He told the President that the proposed mission was "too risky."

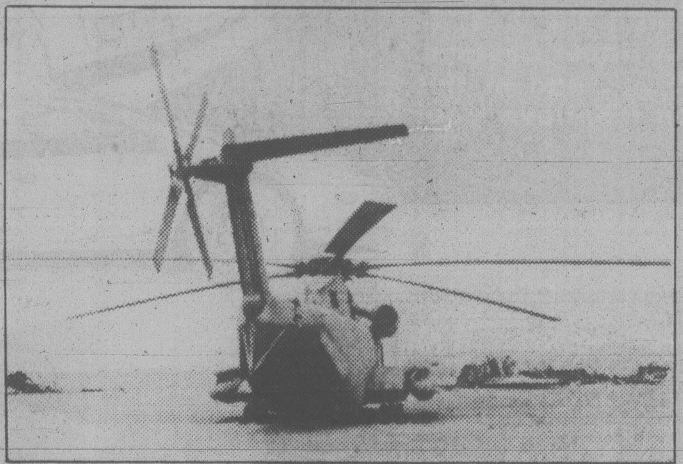
That phrase implies that more is likely to be lost if a mission fails than can be gained if it succeeds.

Now, eight Americans are needlessly dead. The hostages are still captive. Carter has lost his chief foreign policy adviser. The Iranians are more hostile than ever towards the U.S.

It was too risky.

TOM WICKER

Commando raid: Why now?



Military equipment left behind in a raid that was badly timed.

NEW YORK — Like so many other details of the ill-fated attempt to rescue the American hostages from Iran, the timing of it remains unexplained. Why now?

The allies, in particular, must be puzzled and not a little nettled, whatever their public stance. Under intense American pressure, they had just agreed on a series of diplomatic and economic sanctions against Iran. They had made it clear, moreover, that they had done so precisely to head off the possibility that Carter would take dangerous military action.

The president, of course, is arguing that he has not taken such action — that the rescue effort was a "humanitarian" measure not directed against Iran or its people. But surely great risk existed that Iranians would be killed, Iranian facilities damaged, even that Iranian armed forces might have had to be engaged.

False pretenses

Thus the allies could hardly be blamed if it now seems to them that Carter not only defied their clear desire to avoid military action; but that he obtained their assent to sanctions under partially false pretenses. Nor were any of them consulted in advance on Carter's drastic change of policy, even though Defence Secretary Brown said a decision "in principle" had been reached on April 11 to attempt the rescue.

The failure to consult will no doubt be laid to security concerns; they may have been valid but this explanation seems likely to heighten the allies' sense of isolation from the Carter administration's high policy levels, as well as European fears that the United States cannot be counted on to protect their interests when its own may be at stake.

This seeming disregard of the allies is all the more puzzling in that Carter himself said in his early-morning announcement of the mission failure that the support of other nations now would be required more than ever. Yet, his own actions may have made such support more difficult to obtain in the short run, and allied unity more tenuous in the long run.

Congress — whose leaders were not consulted either — also is likely to raise the timing question, among others. Why did Carter act just when the Republican and Democratic seniors of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had called his attention to the requirements of the War Powers Act? Why did he act just when Majority Leader Byrd had pointedly expressed his serious reservations about military action? Did he order the mission because he feared Congress might be moving to limit his freedom of action?

Sanctions failed

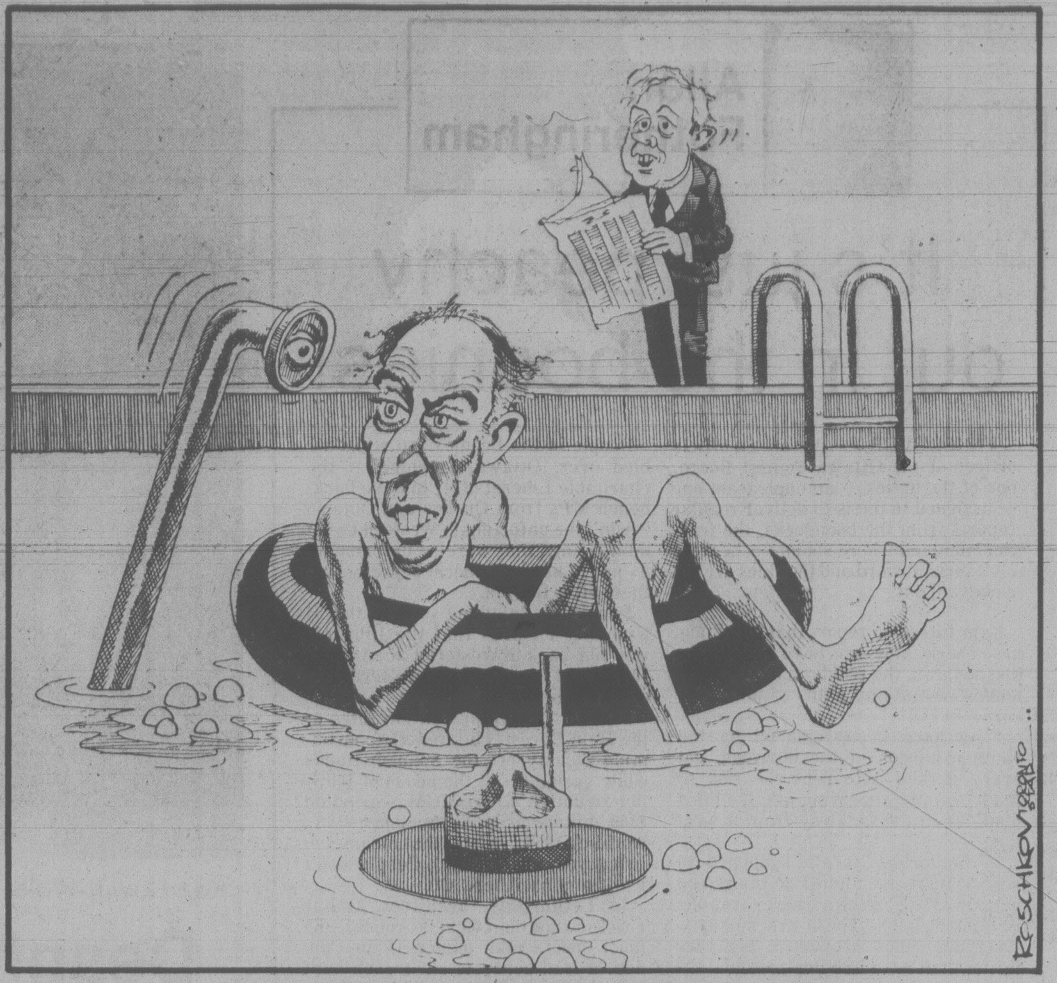
Brown explained why the rescue attempt could not have been delayed much longer — because summer heat and shorter nights would have made it impossible. But that doesn't explain why such an effort was not attempted earlier, during nearly six months in which the highest military and civilian leaders of the administration assured the nation that an Entebbe-like mission to bring out the hostages was not militarily possible and would be a foolish risk to take.

If such a mission was feasible all along, at least two questions may properly be asked. Why was it not attempted earlier, when world support might have been greater and before the hostages themselves had been put through their six-month ordeal? And was it not unnecessarily misleading — particularly to the hostages' families and to Carter's political opponents — to insist on the impossibility of a mission for which men apparently went into training soon after the hostages were seized?

The greater likelihood is that Carter came to believe that a rescue effort had to be made even though it did risk the hostages' lives and the lives of those sent to rescue them, as well as wider consequences — war with Iran or the shutdown of its oil fields, and a strong reaction in the Moslem world. If so, what developed to cause him to order a mission so dangerous that for months he had been calling it impossible?

Carter cited "the steady unraveling of authority" in Iran as causing "mounting dangers" to the hostages, and pointed out that every non-military effort to obtain their release had failed. But "authority" in Iran has been uncertain throughout the hostage crisis; had it become so much more so as to justify the dangerous rescue mission? And was Carter discounting in advance the allied sanctions he had brought such great pressures to achieve?

A more plausible explanation may be that Carter decided that the international situation and domestic politics required him, after so long a time, to take forceful action despite its risks. That possibility, as well as the validity of such a decision, will surely be explored as Congress and others inquire into this extraordinary affair.



"Are you sure you don't want to know what our police are doing."

How to cure them

On recent car travels in Europe we encountered two sections that suggest to me a solution to two questions.

First, send Messrs. Bawlf, McGeer and Curtis in a car east from Monaco on the Italian autostrada, on a bright sunny day. The car is in blinding sunlight for a few hundred yards, then into a tunnel for a few kms. Out to sun, into another tunnel and so on for what seems like an eternity. That would cure them of tunnels.

When they recovered, I'd send them to Algeria Spain and across to Tangiers on the hydrofoil, on an average choppy day sea. It is only a less than 20 mile trip, but that would cure them of hydrofoils. It is a novelty conveyance, but a pleasure trip it is not.

As for the floating bridge, they are dreaming in color. Stormy weather would make for a rough car crossing, not to mention salt spray on the cars. All the extra fuel burned by cars and trucks would add up to a lot more than the ferries burn. The painters' union would be in luck and the repair crews, as the big freighters arrive in Vancouver with a section of the bridge, or tunnel, draped on the bows. To think that people would pay to cross on such a contraption is naive. I know they wouldn't get me to chance it.

One answer to the so-called ferry problem is to switch ferries from Nanaimo. Now we have two magnificent 380-car-carrying ferries running with a handful of cars at the front ends of two huge decks, with enough empty space behind for two soccer games to be held. Yet some days we cross at Swartz Bay with (comparatively speaking) the piddling little Queen of Victoria loaded with cars from front to back plus two ramps. Building a few more big ferries would look after the crossings problem for 50 years. I'd also suggest the catering be turned over to McDonald's. They'd make big profits on the rental fees, and we'd get edible junk food instead of the largely inedible junk food at present that they say they lose money on. — John McMaster, 426- 964 Heywood Avenue.

Not their letter

We have just learned that someone is discrediting the name of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada and using an address of 68 Sparks Street, Ottawa. They are signing their letter L. Hitschmanova, Secretary of CARE.

Under a plan they label "Lend a Helping Hand", they have assigned Pakistani families as guests to Canadian families and include odious instructions for their care and comfort.

We are sure that our donors will at once recognize such an offensive letter to be completely at odds with the views of the USC. However, The Better Business Bureau has suggested that we let you know that this letter has absolutely nothing to do with USC Canada. — Raymond van der Buhs, Director of Administration, Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

Weak-kneed

In response to your editorial "Warning Signals" (April 21), I am struck by two aspects of the situation: the overall disregard for the City of Victoria by the Provincial Capital Commission and the Pan-Pacific Society and their rubber-stamp mayor, Bill Tindall, and the rather weak-kneed approach of your editorial position.

I am glad to see you focusing attention on the issue but wonder when a strong and definitive stand will be taken, especially in view of such misuse of power and influence by all self-serving individuals and groups involved in pushing the Centre through on the Reid property.

The entire Reid property scenario with its proposed convention centre is absolutely appalling. Victoria, and indeed any city, is its citizens and is for its citizens. It is the citizens' overall welfare within the cityscape and its architecture that must be considered first — not just the aspirations of lobbyists who represent the eminence gris of the business community in Victoria.

Also, it is said that 'justice must not only be done but it must seem to be done'. It is the same with government and city planning. The centre must be an integrated, rational plan; integrated within the city, complete with input from all segments of the society it is to serve — not ramrodded through on technicalities.

That Victoria needs a centre to serve many uses, including conventions, is an admirable goal. This goal needs to be served by such items as a rational choice of location (not the Reid Property as it is totally inappropriate), open architectural competition, sound financing, and above all input by the citizens of the Capital Regional District which it will serve — none of which it currently has. — Michael G. F. Richardson, 96 Seagirt Road.

Equal pay

Women and the handicapped are often exploited in jobs in our society for the benefit of those in power. We are often told that the "extra" hours given to our jobs are, or should be, compensated by the feeling of being needed rather than cash.

I feel that as members of an ever expandable society we should enforce a different attitude — for caring and sharing our talents we should be compensated with equal pay or equivalent pay as the case warrants.

As to comments about proving a "means" test for bus passes, there is one already enforced by the government, for the elderly and handicapped. — Mrs. M. Stewart, Victoria.

Six more votes

We've had the pleasure of taking the Princess Marguerite from Seattle on two separate occasions, the most recent as "tour guides" for relatives last season.

Please place this note in your pile as six more votes to keep the beautiful ship running. — Mrs. and Mrs. A. J. Thoman, 1474 Newfoundland Drive, Sunnyvale, California.

Barrett waffles on the Manifesto

There has been considerable press criticism in recent days of my involvement in the debate over a resolution on Canadian unity in the British Columbia Legislature.

The press seems to feel that it is somehow un-Canadian of me to call into question the motives of the Leader of the Opposition, Dave Barrett, on such a delicate issue. However, I would suggest that the citizens of our province have a right to understand those motives on all issues and perhaps even more urgently on the sensitive subject of a united Canada.

I accused Mr. Barrett of being a hypocrite and of orchestrating a well staged performance during a speech in support of Canadian unity. I have not changed my mind. I believe that in Mr. Barrett's public stance today, he plays fast and loose with history

Mr. Barrett signed the "Waffle Manifesto" in 1969 — a document that supports the separation of Quebec from Canada.

The Manifesto itself says, "As New Democrats we see the recognition of Quebec nationhood as essential to the building of an independent socialist Canada. The New Democratic Party supports the right of the people of Quebec to national self-determination up to and including the right to form an independent Quebec State."

The Manifesto was also signed by a number of other people. A Province newspaper story of September 15, 1969, points out "Their Manifesto, which is supported by people like Laurier LaPierre and McGill Professor Charles Taylor, an N.D.P. Vice President, as well as five B.C. MLA's, Dave Barrett, Eileen Dailly, Gordon Dowding, Jim Lorimer, Alex Macdonald, and one Manitoba MLA, Cy Gonick." It was also signed by Norman Levi, but he was not an MLA at the time the story was written.

Yet, today, Dave Barrett says he only signed the document so it could be debated at the convention.

Now I ask you. Would you sign (support, endorse) a document in which you did not believe? I doubt it. I know I wouldn't and I would bet very few of your readers would either.

At any rate, why Dave Barrett? Not one of the 22 NDP Members of Parliament signed it. In fact, the only other elected representative in Canada, other than those from British Columbia, to sign it was one Manitoba MLA. I am truly surprised at our sophisticated and inquiring press accepting almost without question this argument.

Dave Barrett also says today that not only did he sign it just for discussion purposes, but he also spoke against it and voted against it at the NDP convention in Winnipeg.

I can find no evidence anywhere of Dave Barrett speaking against the Manifesto. In fact, Paddy Sherman of the Province wrote of the convention on November 8, 1969, "The B.C. party is without stature on the federal scene. Dave Barrett, the B.C. House Leader, has little enthusiasm for, or interest in national affairs, and made no impact on the convention."

The rules of the convention for debate on the Manifesto policy proposal called for seven speakers on each side to give prepared statements after which a general debate was allowed for about an hour.

I can find no record that Dave Barrett joined in the debate, but one of the seven pro-Manifesto speakers allowed in the formal debate along with Laurier LaPierre was Gordon Dowding, former Speaker of the B.C. Legislature. One can only assume that Mr. Dowding was echoing the support of Levi, Lorimer, Dailly, Macdonald and Barrett.

I believe the facts are quite clear that Mr. Barrett has been less than candid in this matter. If he has changed his mind and now rejects the Manifesto proposals then that is good news. But, if one can't believe what Mr. Barrett says about the past how can one believe what he wants us to believe about the present or future.

So far, Mr. Barrett's 1980 Unity performance is more Disneyland than Shakespeare. — R. H. McClelland, Minister of of Energy.

Hanoi 'empire' a hollow ruin held by arms

Vietnamese soldiers and civilians fleeing across river from Chinese troops during border war last year

By KEYES BEECH
The Los Angeles Times

BANGKOK, Thailand — Five years after they won the war, Vietnam's Communist rulers are facing perhaps the most critical period in their long and bloody revolutionary history.

They have not only lost the peace, but they have plunged their country deep into an economic and political quagmire from which there is no visible escape without a major change of course. And no such change seems to be in the cards.

The formidable North Vietnamese military machine remains intact, if over-extended, with an estimated 200,000 troops deployed along the border with China, another 200,000 committed to Cambodia and about 50,000 in Laos.

But the cost to Vietnam's economy has been high. Economic growth in the north has been reduced to zero. By official admission, the people have barely enough to eat. By contrast, the "liberated" south is comparatively well-fed.

The international goodwill that Hanoi enjoyed in the afterglow of victory has long since evaporated. So has most of the desperately needed foreign aid. It dried up with Vietnam's ruthless expulsion of ethnic Chinese and the invasion of Cambodia.

"There's been a change of roles," an American diplomat said. "The guys in Hanoi are no longer knights in shining armor battling the wicked American imperialists. Today they're the black hats."

And, he added, "instead of playing David to our Goliath, they're now cast as Goliath."

Hanoi's devastated Indochina empire is in large part a hollow ruin held together only by force of arms.

More than a million people, including many of its best brains, have fled Indochina since the Communists seized power in 1975. And while the flood of refugees peaked last year, the end is not in sight. More than 4,000 Vietnamese made their escape last month. Laos and Cambodia are still hemorrhaging.

Yet Bangkok-based analysts say that Hanoi's grip on its own people, as well as those in its satellite states of Cambodia and Laos, remains firm. It is likely to stay that way so long as the Soviet Union, Hanoi's only major backer, continues to pour military aid into Vietnam at a rate estimated at $3 million a day.

Diplomatic sources scoff at the suggestion that Moscow is getting tired of its Vietnam burden.

"With a bloated military budget like theirs, supplying military hardware to Vietnam is the easiest thing the Russians can do," said a Western official with experience in both Moscow and Southeast Asia.

More to the point, he said, is that Vietnam is an excellent investment for the Russians. It added a whole new dimension to Soviet military power by giving the Russians use of U.S.-built air and naval bases in South Vietnam at a time when American military strength in this part of the world was never lower.

Moreover, Vietnam serves as a brake on Chinese expansionism in Southeast Asia, in addition to presenting China with a hostile presence on its southern flank.

But this cuts two ways. One of the greatest burdens Hanoi has to bear is the oppressive weight of 1 billion hostile, unforgiving Chinese on its northern border.

"The greatest mistake Vietnam ever made," one analyst said, "was to ally itself with the Soviet Union against China. In the end, that mistake could be fatal, for China is always there and the Russians are far away."

For the present at least, China has refrained from teaching Vietnam a "second lesson," as it threatened to do after its invasion of North Vietnam last year. But the Vietnamese can never be sure when the Chinese will change their minds. And the expense of defending the border against the Chinese has imposed an enormous burden on Vietnam's economy, which is what Peking counted on.

Vietnam's lightning-swift Soviet-backed invasion of Cambodia 15 months ago was a brilliant military success and exceeded Hanoi's most optimistic expectations. It quickly toppled the pro-Chinese regime of Premier Pol Pot and within two weeks Vietnamese troops were at the Thai-Cambodian border.

It has since turned into a political disaster. Third World countries joined the West in condemning Vietnamese aggression. Since they had brought to an end Pol Pot's genocidal regime, the Vietnamese were stunned at the world reaction.

Thus far, Hanoi has been able to win recognition of its puppet regime in Phnom Penh by only a handful of socialist governments and national liberation movements. It is not recognized by the United Nations.

Some insist that the verdict on Cambodia is still not in, although Vietnam indisputably controls most of the country. Far from being "irreversible" and a "closed book," as Hanoi contends, the Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia is "eminently reversible," U.S. officials argue.

A possible hint that Hanoi might be "wiggling on the Cambodian hook," as one diplomat expressed it, was Premier Pham Va Dong's five-day trip to New Delhi, India.

If Dong's purpose was to persuade Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to recognize the Phnom Penh regime, he returned to Hanoi last week empty-handed. But diplomatic sources pointed out that the unpredictable Mrs. Gandhi might yet confound Hanoi's foes by establishing diplomatic relations with Phnom Penh.

"We are engaged in another contest of wills, of patience with Hanoi," an American official said. "Hanoi's game is obvious. Since no one is prepared to drive Vietnamese troops out of Cambodia by force, Hanoi is counting on holding out until the West and its Asian allies cave in or brake ranks.

"Our strategy is equally obvious. It is to continue to isolate Hanoi and make its occupation of Cambodia so expensive that the leadership will be more flexible."

For the next few years, analysts believe, Hanoi's ambitions will be limited to Indochina, its natural sphere of influence. That could change if and when Vietnam succeeds in consolidating its Indochina empire.

Looking back on the blasted hopes and wreckage that Hanoi has left in its wake since its victorious troops rolled into Saigon on April 30, 1975, one analyst mused:

"It's almost as though the leadership in Hanoi had set out to destroy the fruits of its victory. Obviously, those old revolutionaries are better at waging war than at waging peace."

Perhaps Hanoi's greatest failures have been on the domestic front. By treating the "liberated" south like a conquered country and trying to impose collectivization on Mekong Delta farmers, the north succeeded in alienating virtually the entire population.

Yet even today the south fares far better than the north.

Decadence still flourishes in Saigon — now Ho Chi Minh City — according to a recent story published by the Vietnam news agency. Bribery of officials is routine, crime is rampant and so is prostitution.

A few days before Saigon fell, an American reporter asked a Vietnamese friend what Saigon would do once the Communists came.

"We'll corrupt them," he said.

The Don Juan experience

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — I was about to start writing my big book on Don Juan, the world's most tireless lover, when the interviews with Gay Talese began appearing. Talese had just finished a magnum opus of his own, a book called Thy Neighbor's Wife, all about America's sex life, and in the interviews he said he had immersed himself so thoroughly in the subject that he had actually forced himself to experience many of the activities he was writing about.

This seemed like carrying things a bit far. If he did a book about somebody getting lynched, would Talese insist on being strung up from a cottonwood tree? Possibly so, for I know him to be the most conscientious of writers. This is probably why he has never done a book about a lynchee.

Well, a few days after the first Talese interviews, the publisher of my Don Juan book phoned and asked when I was going to Spain.

"Not going to Spain," I said.

"Do you want to be big time and make millions like Talese, or are you a mouse who's satisfied to write a dinky little worst seller?"

"Erma Bombeck is making millions, and she never leaves her kitchen in Arizona," I said.

"That's because Erma is writing about burning up the skillet and finding her kids' tennis shoes in the salad bowl," said the publisher. "Go to Spain. Immerse yourself in the Don Juan experience."

I had done enough research already to know what he was getting at. According to Mozart's excellent study of Don Juan, the Don had treated Spain like a motel on the outskirts of town. According to his faithful servant Leporello, he had seduced 1,003 women in Old Castile. Country damsels, waiting-maids, city ladies, countesses, duchesses, baronesses, viscountesses, fat girls in winter, thin girls in summer, women of every condition.

My doctor was not encouraging. "This seems to be a very demanding book," he said. "Can't you write something about knitting?"

I was miffed to think he considered me not up to Talese's standards of research.

"One thousand and three," he mused. "In your condition that would be like smoking three packs of cigarettes an hour."

He agreed, however, it would make a great book. "Isn't there another country where Don Juan took life a little easier?" he wondered.

We consulted the Mozart libretto and studied Leporello's statistics. In Italy the Don had seduced only 640.

"But you'd be gorging on pasta between engagements," said the doctor. "Devastating to your blood pressure."

In Germany, 221. "More like it," said the doctor, "but in Germany you'd be tempted to cool off with the beer, and we know about your liver, don't we?"

"Aha!" I cried. "France! Leporello says in France, only 100."

"Be realistic," said the doctor. "Think of the cost of buying dinner for 100 women in Paris."

Eventually, I chose Turkey. Don Juan's triumphs there numbered a mere 91. What's more, since I didn't speak any Turkish, there would be no need to spend a lot of money taking the ladies to movies and nightclubs so we could get to know each other better.

I bought a hookah and a fez and was all packed for Istanbul when my publisher phoned again. He wanted me to come by his office and pick up a false goatee. He said I would come closer to experiencing the real Don Juan with a goatee on my chin, but the beauty part was, it had a small recording device built into the whiskers.

"That way," he said, "everything will be on record just as it happens."

"Why do we want that? I thought this was a book, not a transcribed recording," I said.

"How are you going to write a book after the statue comes to dinner?" he replied.

He was referring to the end of the Don Juan story, in which the Don invites a statue to dinner, and the statue shows up, and the Don and the statue sing at each other, and then the statue takes the Don down to hell.

"It would be great if you could write a terrific inside book about conditions in hell," said the publisher, "but frankly, once you get down there, I'm not sure we can count on your getting the manuscript out. Just leave the goatee behind when the statue grabs you, and we can have all the tapes transcribed into a book right here in the office."

I told him I wasn't going to have the statue to dinner. He said I wasn't fit to touch the shift key on Talese's typewriter. My new book is about a guy who sleeps until 10 every morning. The research is terrific.

Bartering to beat taxman

By BRAD KNICKERBOCKER
Christian Science Monitor

SAN FRANCISCO — James McKenna has a deal for you. In exchange for your services as a printer or perhaps a week at your vacation place in Florida, he'll swap you golf or karate lessons in Albany, N.Y.

If it's a fine leather jacket you're interested in and you're ready to horse-trade something you have or can do well, see Jim Chaffee in Pharr, Texas.

Bartering has been around since Esau swapped his birthright for a bowl of lentils. Probably longer. But as the real value of cash continues to drop, this ancient form of commerce is booming across the United States. Trade clubs and new publications are sprouting up like suburbanites at a garage sale.

A cashless sub-economy worth millions of dollars continues to grow, and that old spoilsport, the taxman, is poking around to make sure the government gets its cut.

"The essence of barter is a creative, problem-solving process where the participants can exchange value for value," said David London, a young Walnut Creek, Calif., entrepreneur who heads up the Comstock Trading Co., publishers of monthly and quarterly periodicals and a new book on bartering.

Barter (from the Old French "barater") can mean to trick or cheat. But London (who has traded advertising space for everything from real estate to Rototiller) said that "unless there's mutual benefit, there's no trade.

"Unfortunately, that concept gets lost with cash."

In any case, Americans by the thousands are formalizing their "propensity to truck, barter and exchange," as Adam Smith put it.

Joe Kessler, president of Trade Clubs in America, estimated that there are as many as 500 barter organizations in America today, some highly sophisticated and computerized.

Some merely are classified listings of goods and services — everything from Kodaks to Krugerrands, speed reading to survival instruction. There are 30 "learning exchanges" around the country, and the Chicago organization that started it all just a few years ago lists 20,000 experts in 3,000 different skills.

Some trade clubs deal in "credits" or "units," others even issue chequebooks, drafts, vouchers or scrip. In these cases, a mini private economy evolves with its own form of currency. One problem here, some experts in barter point out, is that while a member is banking his credits for future use, inflation can do its dirty work.

Also, such formalization of barter invites greater scrutiny from the Internal Revenue Service, just the agency that swap aficionados (who tend to be libertarian souls, judging by the articles in their publications) are trying to avoid.

According to the IRS, "gross income includes all income you receive — in the form of money, property or services — that is not, by law, expressly exempt from tax . . ."

The IRS recently ruled that, for tax purposes, the value of each "trade unit" is one dollar.

But apparently there is considerable room for negotiation (if not haggling) with the tax collector over such fuzzy issues as "fair market value," "like kind" and "mutual gifts." Particularly if trading is done between individuals and kept to relatively isolated instances not involving items or services of very large value, bartering can offer substantial tax advantages.

Plus, there's the satisfaction of "unlocking yourself as much as you can from the money system," as one barter expert put it, gaining a little more control over one's economic life.

"It helps me quench my anger at excessive taxation," grumbled Texas leather man Chaffee, who's bartered new jackets for a roof repair on his factory. But Chaffee also is quite sure that bartering "will lead to a lot of cash business" among the 15,000 folks in Pharr.

Meanwhile, if you're interested in a well-used quarter-inch drill or a Honda motorcycle (new mufflers, needs a battery), just call me. I'm looking for a five-string banjo.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market rose sharply in moderate mid-afternoon trading today.

Reclassified common shares of Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. began trading at the opening, replacing the previously listed A and B shares. Shareholders approved the change and an increase in authorized capital effective April 15.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said shares of Action Traders Inc. will be removed from the trading list at the close May 30 at the request of the company, which has sold or otherwise disposed of some of its principal operating assets.

Among industrials, Gulf Canada rose 3½ to $150¼, Dome Petroleum 2⅛ to $72⅛, Murphy Oil 1⅜ to $24⅞, Inter-City Gas 1 to $19½ and Imperial Oil A 1 to $41⅝.

Nowsco Well Service fell 1 to $20½, Kaiser Resources 1 to $27¼.

Vancouver

Prices were down in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11:00 a.m. PDT was 1,685,790 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 106 advanced, 142 declined and 189 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led the industrials, gaining .20 to $6½ on 35,321 shares and Computrex Centres remained unchanged at .23 on 1,500. Keg Restaurants dropped .35 to $2.45 on 1,100 and Proflex Ltd. was steady at .23 on 1,000. Balco Industries was unchanged at $5¼ and Canadian Javelin Ltd. remained steady at $1.06.

On the resource and development board, Seaforth Mines Warrants dropped .03 to .30 on 59,900 shares and Pacific Foam declined .01 to $1.19 on 29,020. New York

The stock market advanced moderately today, adding to its sharp gains of the past week.

The news background provided additional evidence of falling interest rates, but a substantial economic slowdown developing at the same time.

A few banks cut their prime lending rates to 18½ per cent Tuesday, matching a reduction in the basic charge on blue-chip loans posted Monday by Morgan Guaranty Trust of New York.

Analysts meanwhile were predicting that the government's monthly report on the index of leading economic indicators, due out Wednesday, would show a sharp decline.

First Pennsylvania dropped ⅞ to $5 in active trading. On Monday a $1.5-billion financial rescue package for the company from 25 other banking organizations and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. was announced.

Mobil led the active list, up ⅛ to $71⅜.

London

The London stock market rose moderately near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index was up 4.2 to 436.3.

Industrials and oils advanced while golds declined.

Canadian shares were mixed.

How Saxon outruns Xerox.
(The Saxon 302 vs. the Xerox 2600)

Saxon starts faster. Our Saxon 302 compact plain paper copier starts faster and turns out copies quicker than the new Xerox 2600. That's just for starters.

Saxon runs easier. Our Saxon has superior features. Two paper cassettes holding more than double the paper supply of the Xerox 2600. Press-tone controls. A self-diagnostic system. And a few other advances Xerox hasn't caught up with.

Saxon runs you less money. With all this, the Saxon costs less to buy, rent or maintain than the Xerox.

company reports

Candel Oil

Candel Oil Ltd. reinvested all of its cash flow and borrowed another $8,308,000 for development activities in the first quarter of 1980, treasurer G. L. Osmond said in announcing the company's financial and operating results for the first three months of 1980.

Candel had first-quarter net earnings of $5,173,000 or $1.17 a share, up 99 per cent from 1979 restated net earnings of $2,596,000 or 59 cents a share. Net earnings in both periods included an extraordinary item from the recovery of subsidiary company tax credits.

Scott Paper

Scott Paper Ltd. reports first-quarter sales were up 20.4 per cent to $44 million from $36.7 million in the first quarter of 1979.

Company chairman George O'Leary told shareholders that income after taxes increased to $1.7 million from $1.2 million in the first quarter of 1979.

O'Leary said the company's gains resulted from strong sales of both consumer and industrial trademark products.

UAL Inc.

UAL Inc., parent of United Airlines, lost $40.3 million in the first quarter because of worsening U.S. economic conditions and rising jet fuel prices and will skip its regular quarterly dividend on common stock, the company says.

The loss followed 1979's loss of $72.8 million, which the company attributed to a prolonged strike that shut down United Airlines.

The first-quarter loss, equivalent to $1.37 a share, came despite a 19-per-cent increase in revenues to $1.16 billion from $973 million in the same period a year ago.

Trimac

Trimac Ltd. of Calgary has announced a capital budget of $60 million for 1980, excluding its purchase of Cactus Drilling Corp. of Texas.

At its annual shareholders' meeting, Trimac said about $20 million of the capital budget is for its Kenting Drilling subsidiary to purchase four rigs. Three of the rigs will be used in Canada and the fourth overseas, probably in Britain.

Trimac reported record earnings of $15 million or $2 a share for the last financial year on revenues of more than $193 million.

Arco

Atlantic Richfield Co. said its first-quarter profits rose 76 per cent from last year's levels as its Alaskan oil output climbed.

Atlantic Richfield said it earned $426.1 million in the quarter, up from $242.2 million a year before. Per-share earnings rose to $3.45 from $1.98 as sales rose 54 per cent to $5.4 billion from $3.5 billion.

Bralorne

All profit centres contributed to the excellent first-quarter financial results of Bralorne Resources Ltd., company president F.W. Fitzpartick, has announced.

Gross revenue for the first three months of 1980 totalled $50,527,000, an increase of 85 per cent over the same period in 1979. Net income for the 1980 period was $4,794,000, or 72 cents a share, 137 per cent ahead of the 1979 first-quarter figures of $2,023,000 or 30 cents a share.

Bethlehem

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bethlehem Copper Corp. has reported net earnings for the 1980 first quarter were $4.2 million or 65.7 cents a share up from $2.8 million or 44 cents a share for the corresponding 1979 period.

President Bryan Reynolds said copper prices which peaked in February at $1.67 a pound hit a low of $1.14 a pound during the quarter.

He said Bethlehem will pay a dividend of 25 cents a share June 13 to shareholders of record June 1.

125,000 Christians jam capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 125,000 people raised their voices in song and day-long prayer today and were told, "We're going back to God."

It was like a giant tent revival with the people gathering for a day of prayer, gospel singing and fasting.

Rally organizers had hoped for 200,000 to 500,000 — and even talked of a million — but rain the last two days and a lowering sky today were expected to hold down the crowds.

The day-long rally, called "Washington for Jesus" has been criticized by some organized churches for its conservative political overtones. But planners said it was an attempt at "calling the national leadership back to God."

Almost every Christian denomination in the world was represented, with fundamentalists predominating. There were blacks and Hispanics; there were clusters of people holding hands, speaking in tongues.

"Let us repent of the sins of our government and our leaders," said Vinson Synan, assistant general superintendent of the Pentecostal Holiness Church. "Lord, we believe the judgment of the lord is on us in Iran and on these hostages because of the sins of this nation."

The rally has been spearheaded by some of the leading television evangelists in the United States.

More than 60 speakers were scheduled to take the microphone during 12 hours of prayer and fasting on the National Mall.

Rev. John Gimenez, a Virginia Beach, Va., evangelist first dreamed of the having a big Christian rally 1½ years ago, denied the aim is political. But he acknowledged many of the rally planners have strong views against abortion, in favor of allowing prayer in schools, opposition to the equal rights amendment and against homosexual conduct.

Among other sponsors of the day-long rally, which organizers said might cost $1.2 million, are Jim Bakker, president of the PTL Televison; Ben Armstrong, president of National Religious Broadcasting; Bill Bright, founder of Campus Crusade for Christ, and evangelist Rex Humbard.

In a statement aimed at the "Jesus for Washington" rally, representatives of 20 religious organizations, including the 32-member National Council of Churches, issued a statement accusing the evangelists of trying to "Christianize" the government:

"It is arrogant to assert that one's position on a political issue is Christian and that all others are un-Christian, immoral or sinful."

Ford's first-quarter loss a record

DETROIT (AP) — Citing inflation and the slumping North American car market, Ford Motor Co. reported a record $164-million first-quarter loss and said high interest rates, increasing energy costs and the weakening economy may cause more problems later in 1980.

The No. 2 U.S. automaker said Monday its second consecutive quarter in the red resulted from a $473-million deficit in U.S. domestic operations, its worst loss from North American business ever.

That was about the loss some have predicted for tottering Chrysler Corp., which has yet to announce its first-quarter results, and was substantially more than industry analysts had expected from Ford.

In last year's first quarter, Ford earned $595 million, or $4.97 a share worldwide. Profits in that period totalled $220 million in the United States and $375 million from foreign business.

The loss this quarter amounted to $1.36 a share.

Ford's worst previous three-month-period loss came in the fourth quarter of 1979 when the automaker lost $109 million worldwide. The previous record loss from domestic operations was $299 million in the third quarter last year.

Lower volume, increased marketing costs, more small vehicles and the impact of inflation were responsible for the record loss, Chairman Phillip Caldwell and President Donald Petersen said in a statement.

The small vehicles that have become popular as gasoline prices rise generally carry smaller profit margins. In addition, domestic auto sales were down 21 per cent in the first three months of 1980 compared with the year before.

Other factors, including the probable recession, are "expected to aggravate Ford's losses at least in the near term," Ford said.

Helping to offset the domestic loss was a $309-million, or $2.58-a-share, profit in foreign operations. But this was 17.9 per cent below the same period in 1979, a decrease attributed to reduced sales.

Ford of Canada Ltd.'s consolidated sales dropped 26 per cent to $1.4 billion in the first quarter of this year, down $459 million from the similar 1979 period.

The decline resulted in a net loss of $23.3 million or $2.81 a share, compared with a profit of $1.6 million or 19 cents a share in 1979.

Sales from Canadian operations totalled $1 billion, a 33 per cent drop from $1.5 billion last year, reflecting primarily lower vehicle sales to the slumping United States market.

The net loss from Canadian operations totalled $21.9 million, compared with a $13.1-million profit in the first quarter of 1979.

Over-all revenue for the latest quarter fell 24 per cent to $9.61 billion from $12.6 billion in the same period last year.

Ford is the third U.S. auto-maker to report first-quarter results. General Motors Corp. profits fell 85 per cent from the first quarter of 1979, to $155 million. American Motors Corp. earnings declined 96 per cent to $1.2 million.

Ford's foreign profit in the latest quarter was given a boost of $91 million from a tax treaty with Britain that gave Ford a refund of half the taxes paid on its behalf in Britain since 1975.

Before the new treaty, Britain, to avoid double taxation of profits, gave refunds to British shareholders for taxes paid on their behalf by the companies. Overseas shareholders could not get refunds. Now, overseas shareholders get a refund for half the amount.

Two more oil firm profits gush

United Press International

Phillips Petroleum Co., the 12th largest U.S. oil company, Tuesday reported its first-quarter profits rose 91 percent and Cities Service Co., the 18th largest refiner, recorded a 116 percent surge.

Phillips earned $338.6 million, or $2.20 a share, up from $177 million, or $1.15 a share, in the opening quarter last year. Revenues climbed 70 percent to $3.38 billion from $1.99 billion.

Cities Service's first-quarter earnings jumped to $170.1 million, or $6.13 a share, from $78.5 million, or $2.83 a share, a year earlier. Revenues were not immediately available.

Cities Service Co.'s board voted to increase the quarterly dividend to $1.20 a share from $1 a share, payable June 2 to shareholders of record May 12.

Phillips and Cities Service were among the last U.S. oil companies to announce first-quarter results, which have been higher for the industry as a whole than most petroleum analysts had expected.

Analysts said they had underestimated the impact of President Carter's decontrol of crude oil prices on first-quarter earnings before the windfall profits tax took effect March 1 — the final month of the reporting period.

The oil companies also benefited from the sharp runup in foreign oil prices that began during the second quarter last year and surprisingly strong metal and chemical earnings, the analysts said.

'Baha'i Baha'i world' today!

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI) — Members of a religious splinter group huddled in their bomb shelters today awaiting the outcome of their leader's prediction that nuclear warfare will envelop the United States by nightfall.

Bearded, grandfatherly Leland Jensen gathered with about 150 of his followers Monday night to hold a feast before they retreated into their makeshift bomb shelters. Months ago, Jensen had predicted April 29 as the day of the holocaust mentioned in the New Testament book of Revelation.

Not all of those at the feast were as convinced as the group's patriarch that today was doomsday.

Some sect members indicated the months of preparation for the predicted holocaust had caused some domestic friction.

Even Jensen hedged his bet:

"If there is no nuclear war today, something will happen to start a nuclear war."

Other members of the religious group, called Baha'i Under the Provisions of the Covenant, headed underground in such places as Sheridan, Wyo.; Durango, Colo., and Fort Smith, Ark.

Jensen sees the current world order as the Beast of the Apocalypse, which he says will begin to die in the holocaust and will finally expire after 7 more years of tribulation.

prepared to talk about sexual specifics or if they fear they will interfere with the cultural-religious domain of parents in speaking to students about sexuality.

He said it is time trustees stopped fooling themselves; the present program is inadequate and he was not prepared to enlarge on an inadequacy.

It was "absolute garbage" to say the job is being done and to suggest it is about to be done through committee study of curriculum amendment was "crapola," Fisher said. The number of 14-year-old pregnancies proves this to be nonsense.

He did not want to flaunt birth control or birth control devices, but to engender a healthy framework, "an educational process to give the kids the tools to survive."

This also implied, he said, a suitable teacher training program.

Trustee Mike Hutchison agreed that children need help to develop in a changing world. They don't understand their relationships with each other.

Trustee John Young said there is a fundamental psychological problem, since everyone understands the physiology of sex.

Trustee Martin Levin said society has expressed sexuality as being something apart from human life, as evidenced by the explicit manuals available on any drugstore magazine rack.

He said the mechanics of sex has been stressed, "the pulleys and chandeliers and how to perform ever more spectacularly."

Instead of adulation for sexual athletes, there must be regard for the nuances and complexities of human sexuality, Levin said.

Pickup had the closing word and agreed a program in sexuality should cover the whole range of instruction from kindergarten to Grade 12. The current program does not do enough or allow for meaningful discussion with regular classroom teachers and questions by students as they occur.

Indian Ocean and Persian Gulf region.

Earlier, a state department spokesman said the incident occurred over international waters and the U.S. aircraft did not violate Iranian air space.

President Carter was back in Washington today after a quick trip to San Antonio, Tex., to express his personal thanks to the servicemen injured in last week's aborted attempt to rescue U.S. hostages in Iran, and was moving to fill the hole created by Cyrus Vance's resignation as secretary of state. Vance resigned Monday in protest against the rescue mission.

Texas holds its Democratic primary Saturday, and the White House obviously was not unmindful of the political calendar.

Officials in Sen. Edward Kennedy's campaign reportedly were upset that Carter flew to San Antonio — upstaging Kennedy's long-planned rally there Monday night.

In related developments:

— Australia has announced it will ban all exports to Iran except food and medicine if there are no clear signs by May 17 that the American hostages will be released.

— U.S. congressional leaders reported today President Carter told them he met secretly Sunday with about 150 of the men who participated in the Iranian rescue attempt and they all said they wanted to try again.

— Carter's attempt to rescue the hostages in Iran is overwhelmingly endorsed by Americans, including those who are split on his over-all performance, the latest CBS News poll shows.

Bastion man takes off on financial fantasies

Edwin Stephenson . . . oh what the magic wand could do for Bastion at St. Ann's!

By PAUL MINVIELLE

There was a distant look in Edwin Stephenson's eyes as he gazed out his office window overlooking the busy Inner Harbor.

Stephenson, Bastion Theatre's artistic director, had been asked to think about his organization's future: a fearless forecast with no financial limitations, absolute pie-in-the-sky.

A slight smile creased his face as he momentarily forgot Bastion's current dire financial straits.

"If only I had a magic wand," he said.

Then he launched into his magical vision of Bastion's tomorrows.

Stephenson's first order of business would be to expand the youth touring company to two or even three companies.

"And they could have their own permanent director," Stephenson said.

Bastion already has Victoria playwright Jeremy Young at work on a new show called I Knew It Yesterday for senior students for next season.

"Some of the places we visit could take two shows," Stephenson said.

Also in the works for younger students is an hour-long show, The Ice Wolf. Young is adapting the seven-character play to a cast of four to accommodate the company's staffing limitations.

Some of Bastion's future is already in the works.

"Next year we're going on tour with one of our main stage productions, The Importance of Being Earnest," Stephenson said.

He'd like to take all of Bastion's main stage productions on the road.

In many remote communities up-Island and in the Interior, most adults in town turn out for the touring company's presentations for senior students.

"Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could take these larger productions to them?" Stephenson asked. "I'd like to make this company the touring company in the province."

The effervescent director would also like to see another small touring company that could do special little programs for shut-ins and hospitals.

Stephenson bubbled with repressed excitement.

"A summer season would be nice to launch, but it's not our mandate," he said, explaining that the federal, provincial and municipal grants the theatre groups now get don't cover summer stock.

Stephenson then outlined some of the problems Bastion faces with scheduling at the McPherson Playhouse. He wishes the runs on main stage plays could be longer, and other facilities — office space, rehearsal halls, props, the group's ever-popular theatre school — are scattered around town.

"It's a community theatre. We'd save a bit of money if we could play longer."

Then, with a sly smile, Stephenson sprung the big dream for Bastion's future: "We need our own building, of course!"

Would that be the ultimate for Bastion?

Not quite.

"We could always present live theatre via television satellite to remote locations," Stephenson declared, beaming. "That would be the next step. That would be perfect."

"It wouldn't be difficult to adapt for TV. How wonderful for the actors, the extra money and exposure."

Stephenson foresees the day when scripts are written especially for British Columbians or Victorians.

He also envisions a Victoria theatre so lively they'd be bringing in trainloads of patrons on special theatre excursions from up-Island.

"They could have a hostess on board and box lunches. Get them here for a matinee and have them home that night."

"People are already coming from Port Alberni for our performances."

Bastion's financial situation is tight. While Stephenson is optimistic, he concedes things aren't good.

"We've got to get money or there won't be a future for Bastion," he said.

"Some of these predictions presuppose a facility of our own though."

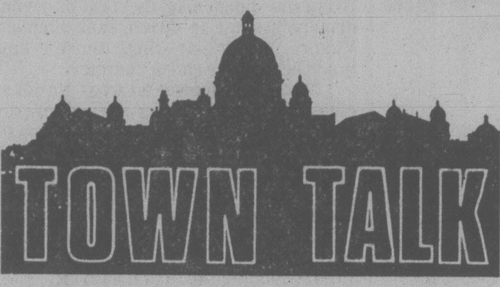
And where might that be?

Why, the grounds of St. Ann's Academy would be just perfect, Stephenson argues, and he argues convincingly.

A new facility on the grounds there would include a theatre, box office, offices, rehearsal halls, even babysitting facilities.

Anybody have a spare $6 million?

Stephenson needs it to buy a more powerful magic wand.



TOWN TALK

F.M. Rattenbury's, the restaurant in the Crystal Garden, is being readied for opening in May or June.

But a small sign posted on its door claims the delay is upholding tradition.

Says the sign: "F.M. Rattenbury never opened anything on time" and asks the public to be patient.

Meanwhile, Elizabeth Johnson, a management consultant working for the restaurant, says people ask why the restaurant is named after Rattenbury when Percy James, a lesser known Victoria architect of the time, did most of the work.

Aside from the fact that F.M. Rattenbury's sounds better than P.L. James', Rattenbury did come up with the basic design of the structure complete with glass roof although James made Rattenbury's idea workable.

The restaurant doesn't ignore James entirely — it features his picture on its logo beside Rattenbury's.

The province lost a skilled artisan with the death in a James Bay fire last week of David Murdoch.

Murdoch, 59, had worked for the provincial government since 1962 doing innumerable detailed and ornate wood carving jobs including the map of the province featured in the foyer of the Provincial Museum.

The map is thought to be the only one of its kind in the world. Murdoch, with assistance from a variety of government departments, created the map from a single slab of spruce.

The details of the land are all in proportion and even the the curvature of the slab represents the curvature of the earth.

Murdoch also carved items such as violins and guitars.

The B.C. Police Commission has produced a handy brochure on action citizens can take in registering complaints against police forces in the province.

The one-page brochure outlines in simply form the complaint procedures as contained in the B.C. Police Act passed by the legislature in 1975.

It says that if a person has a complaint against a policeman the first step is to go to police headquarters and talk to the complaints officer who will investigate and try to settle the matter. It is informal, quick and, in 90 per cent of the cases, results in a satisfactory resolution of the problem.

If the person is not satisfied he may then make a formal written complaint which the police chief or his delegate will investigate.

If the person is still not satisfied he may demand a public hearing by the police board.

Everyone knows that sewage pipes at Clover Point have long been a subject of discussion in Victoria, but a reader discovered recently that the matter has been continuing for longer than anyone might think.

He sent along a quote from the "Victoria" section of Williams' Official B.C. Directory: "Clover Point is the most southerly point and is only a short distance east of Beacon Hill. At the end of this point is the mouth of the great main sewer now under construction."

Date of the directory? 1892.

Oak Bay High School alumni may be able to down a drink at the school's 75th anniversary reunion on May 30-June 1 but they're going to have to step outside to puff on a cigarette.

A month ago Victoria school trustees voted to amend a long-standing policy banning liquor from school property at the request of the reunion organizers.

The reunion is expected to draw thousands of former students and staff.

Oak Bay council will give reunion organizers a $1,000 grant to help pay for the organization of an archives for the school.

Midnight bed madness

The Visitors Information Centre was dismayed today to learn tourists will be arriving from Seattle after 10:30 p.m. in the summer schedule.

Allowing 30 minutes to clear customs, this means upwards of 850 people will be looking for rooms after 11 p.m.

"This schedule is not the best," said Rita Wilson, who is running an Overflow Housing program for the VIC.

"It means it will be almost midnight in some cases before these tourists find a bed."

If hotels are full, tourists will be directed to private homes where citizens have volunteered to receive guests for a fee. University dorms may also be available.

Ferry schedule knocked

At the same time, the B.C. Steamship Co. announced it would accept payment in Canadian funds in Victoria for travel on the Victoria Princess ferry (formerly Queen of Prince Rupert) and for the jetfoil.

The fare will be $15 one way for the ferry, $25 for the jetfoil. Passengers can pay in Canadian funds in Victoria but must pay in U.S. funds in Seattle.

The announcement means Victorians save about $3.75 on a one-way jetfoil ticket because they will not have to pay the exchange rate.

Americans will also be able to buy a ticket in Victoria for $25 Canadian, a saving of $3.75, but they will have had to buy a ticket at U.S. rates in Seattle to get here.

Meanwhile, the VIC will face additional costs to keep its Causeway bureau open after 11 p.m. all summer.

The provincial ministry of tourism has agreed to meet some of the additional cost by supplying two employees to help on the late shift.

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice-president Bill Anderson said the schedule is not as bad as he had feared.

"We had been worried that the last trip might arrive as late as midnight."

He said he was confident Victorians would find a way to deal with the late arrivals.

Mrs. Wilson said passengers on the late voyage would be asked on board if they need hotel reservations and this information will be telephoned ahead so the VIC will be ready for the tourists with hotel rooms or beds in private homes.

The schedule:

In the shoulder months, from May 16 to June 22, and from Sept. 2 to Oct. 6, the ferry will be leave Seattle at 7:30 a.m., arrive Victoria noon. Leave Victoria 6 p.m., arrive Seattle 10:30 p.m. In the summer months from June 23 to Sept. 1, there will be in addition a trip from Victoria at 12:30 p.m., arriving in Seattle at 5 p.m. and one leaving Seattle at 6 p.m., arriving in Victoria at 10:30 p.m. Then the ferry will leave Victoria at 11 p.m. for an overnight trip to Seattle, arriving at 6 a.m. There will be stateroom space.

The jetfoil:

In the shoulder months it leaves Seattle at 6 a.m., arrives Victoria at 8 a.m., leaves Victoria 8:30 a.m., arrives Seattle at 10:30 a.m. Leaves Seattle at 4 p.m., arriving here at 6 p.m. It leaves Victoria at 6:30 p.m., arriving Seattle at 8:30 p.m.

There is an extra midday sailing on the jetfoil in the peak summer period.

Brakes sought on trail bikes

Trail bikers joyriding along municipal pathways may find their activities regulated by the government if Saanich council gets its way.

Council decided Monday to ask the provincial transport ministry to develop a licensing system for trailbikes to control mounting problems.

Municipal staff told aldermen the bikers are creating a disturbance on Colquitz Creek, Cadboro Bay and Cordova Bay paths.

Obstacles to prevent bikers from using paths are one option suggested by municipal administrator William Tremayne in a report.

He also recommends asking the public to call police when bikers are spotted on walkways.

But Ald. Irene Block said police already have their hands full policing beach parties.

And Eric Robinson, 5024 Wesley, said police are not overly concerned about catching the offending bikers because the courts treat them lightly.

St. Margaret's pioneer days

A spring fair with a pioneer days theme will be held at St. Margaret's School, 1080 Lucas Avenue May 3 from 3 to 7 p.m.

The event will feature panning for gold, a grand auction from 4 to 5 p.m. and a puppet show.

Colwood man stabbed

A 31-year-old Colwood man is in critical condition in Victoria General Hospital after being stabbed Monday in what police describe as a domestic dispute.

Colwood RCMP said Toby Willie was stabbed at least three times in the chest and the abdomen at his home at 7-497 Island Highway about 7:30 p.m.

A 42-year-old woman was arrested at the scene and is in custody. Charges are expected to be laid.

Willie was operated on late Monday and is now in the intensive care unit.

May 22 meet on Tillicum

Saanich council Monday voted unanimously to hold a public information meeting May 22 to discuss the controversial Tillicum shopping centre with residents.

A number of impact studies on the new plan for a 495,000-square-foot complex will be prepared by municipal staff and shown along with a presentation from developers Cal Investments Ltd.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the municipal hall on Vernon.

At an emergency meeting last Thursday council dropped plans for a public meeting and impact studies in order to quickly lift a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre to 295,000 square feet.

A Capital Region District move last Wednesday to prepare a bylaw that would make it impossible for Saanich to remove the covenant persuaded a majority of aldermen to lift it immediately.

But aldermen are convinced a public meeting to let Saanich residents know what's going on is a good idea.

Cal Investments last week offered to arrange and pay for a public meeting.

The company is preparing a traffic report for the meeting and reports will be submitted from the police and fire departments.

Some crashes heard around the weekend

Lo, winter is gone and spring is here, but that's not why they started taking the ice out of Memorial Arena Sunday night. No, the decision came when the Cougars crashed in Regina in their bid for a Memorial Cup berth. Now it's wait until next year for coach Jack Shupe and his lads. Next week lacrosse takes over where hockey was king.

It was a good run for the Cougars before the end came. But the Pats proved the better club with goalkeeper Bart Hunter a mite steadier than his counterparts, Grant Fuhr and Kevin Eastman. And maybe it was his extra experience — after all, he was in the Cup final last year — that told the final story.

So it's good luck to the Pats in the cup test. They should do well with the series near home (at Brandon) and at home (in Regina). They say the Regina dressing-room walls are plastered with pictures of the heroes that have gone before. The Pats haven't been allowed to forget them.

And then the real shocker! Montreal Canadiens won't be around to win a fifth Stanley Cup. But Minnesota North Stars figure on having a chance — albeit a long one, just like the last — to get to the final round at the expense of Philadelphia Flyers.

Why not? Because who gave the North Stars much of a shot when they were paired against Canadiens. Not many and, oh sure, the Canadiens were below strength and had as many as five of their star performers missing for the series, including the one who might have made the final difference — Guy Lafleur. But still the Habs finished 19 points ahead of the Stars, had a 21-game unbeaten streak entering the playoffs and had the best home record (30 victories at the Forum) in the NHL. They figured.

So yes, that's an upset. And a biggie, especially as the Stars had to win the last two and the last one at Montreal.

But now I'll wager all the Montreal lovers who had gone into hiding will resurface as Sabre fans. Yes, Scotty Bowman will be leading the Buffalo crowd against the Islanders. And, after all, he's an ex-Canadien, the guy who made them tick for those last four years and, as there isn't a team from Canada around . . . we need one to root for . . . Buffalo is the closest geographically . . . so "up the Sabres!"

And don't discount the Stars. There's no telling how good they might be. Certainly they don't scare easily despite their youth and, if they can get by the Flyers, who will be equally as tough as the Habs and just might be back at their early-season peak, then a final Buffalo-Minnesota match-up would loom as a natural, wouldn't it? Just as easily, however, both series could go the other way. They're too close to pick.

But if those two thuds on the hockey scene weren't loud enough, there was the crash to end all crashes at Hec Edmundson Pavilion in Seattle where the SuperSonics weren't very "super". The world champions blew a 21-point lead (do pro teams do that?) against the Lakers in the third quarter of their NBA playoff and now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, a tremendous performer, and his mates must rate odds-on to take the western final. The Sonics had to take two straight against Milwaukee, and did. But the Bucks aren't the Lakers, who outscored the Sonics 24-2 over one stretch. Whew! And sorry about that, but the Sonic reign appears about over.

Then on Saturday comes racing's first spectacular, the Kentucky Derby, but without a spectacular name as has marked the previous few years . . . Spectacular Bid . . . Seattle Slew . . . Affirmed . . .

But there may be variety.

There is a one-owner. The owner is Harry Oak. The horse is Rockhill Native, winner of last week's Blue Grass Stakes. Rockhill Native is a gelding. Only seven geldings have won the 1¼-mile race.

There might be Genuine Risk, a filly. Only one filly, Regret in 1915, has won the Derby and none has started since Silver Spoon finished fifth in 1959.

There is a show biz: Jack Klugman, the movie-television actor is co-owner of Jaklin Klugman with John Dominguez, a landscape architect. The colt, which has a girl's name because at first her owners thought he was a filly, ran his way into the Derby picture Saturday by winning the $20,000 Stepping Stone Purse.

About 15 three-year-olds are expected to go to the post and if many of them probably aren't worth a plugged nickel as far as a bet is concerned, that just might be the wager to make.

John Schiff's Plugged Nickle, the Winter Book favorite, has won the Florida Derby and the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct in his last two starts. He could make it three.

Remember, you got it here first.

Cancel series, says Eagle

TORONTO (UPC) — Support for a boycott of September's Canada Cup hockey tournament with the Soviet Union escalated today with Alan Eagleson, chief negotiator for Hockey Canada, calling on the Canadian government to cancel the series.

A number of National Hockey League players and owners already have gone on record as opposing the six-nation series if the Soviets are invited to attend.

Eagleson, Canadian organizer for the International Ice Hockey Federation, previously had said the Canada Cup series should proceed, despite the growing boycott of the Moscow Olympics because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

However, Eagleson said during a radio interview today he would be happy to see the government cancel the series.

"The government of Canada made a decision on the Olympics, and if the government would make the same decision with respect to this . . . tournament, the first fellow who'll be heaving a sigh of relief will be Alan Eagleson."

The Canadian government and the Canadian Olympic Association decided last week to boycott the Moscow Olympics.

Eagleson noted, however, that the contract between Hockey Canada and the IIHF calls for a $1.8 million forfeiture if the series is cancelled, and said "I would rather not see Hockey Canada be subject to payment."

The Toronto lawyer, chairman of the NHL Players Association, said he would not be surprised if the players decide at their May 29 meeting to refuse to participate in the series. That, he said, would trigger another clause in the Hockey Canada-IIHF contract, stipulating that each participating nation send their best players to the tournament.

"Once that guarantee cannot be met, I'm off the hook," he said. "The confusion that exists could be resolved very quickly if the government of Canada would simply stand up and say 'we don't want to play the Soviets in anything.'"

On Monday, however, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said the Soviet national hockey team would not be barred from competing.

Noting the United States, which is spearheading the boycott, did not ban Soviet athletes from last February's Winter Games at Lake Placid, he said: "We are not condemning all contacts with Russian athletes ... artists or Russians of other kinds. We are condemning the Moscow Games."

In discussions with reporters Monday, Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers, Phil Esposito of New York Rangers, Pierre Larouche, Steve Shutt and Mark Napier of Montreal Canadiens all said they favored a Canada Cup boycott.

Flyers owner Ed Snyder agreed, saying, "If the anti-Soviet sentiment is as strong as it appears to be, we should cancel the tournament. there's no sense going against public opinion."

NHL President John Ziegler said the decision must be made by Eagleson and Hockey Canada.

Stars 'aren't done yet', Sonmor cautions Flyers

Times News Services

Minnesota North Stars aren't just glad to be in Philadelphia. The upstarts of the National Hockey League Stanley Cup playoffs expect to win the Cup.

Coach Glen Sonmor took umbrage at the suggestion that the North Stars had everything to gain and nothing to lose in their best-of-seven semi-final series against Philadelphia Flyers starting tonight.

Fresh from an upset of the defending champion Montreal Canadiens, Sonmor glared when it was suggested that his team had a wonderful season, that it should be proud of what it has accomplished.

The intimation, of course, was that the North Stars were lucky to be in the first Stanley Cup semi-final round in which not one of the six pre-expansion NHL teams is a participant.

"Hey, we're not done yet," Sonmor said. "We're not there yet. We think we have a great chance to win this series."

Minnesota, sixth in the league over all during the regular season, reached the round of four with a best-of-five win over Toronto and eliminated the Canadiens, four games to three.

The Flyers, top team during the 80-game grind, swept Edmonton Oilers and ousted New York Rangers, 4-1.

Coach Pat Quinn of the Flyers wants to keep the goals to a minimum in the series.

"I don't like wide open hockey," said Quinn, who described the North Stars as offensively aggressive.

In Buffalo, the Islanders agreed they might have to play a different style against the Sabres than they would have against the Flyers. "Maybe it won't be as physical, but we can adapt to anybody's game," said Islanders goaltender Billy Smith.

Defenceman Jim Schoenfeld said he and other Buffalo players may have been looking forward to playing the Canadiens.

However, he said the skilled preparations of coaches Scotty Bowman, Roger Neilson and Jim Roberts, and a dose of playoff excitement should get the team back on track.

"The emotion of being in the playoffs is stronger than the emotion of any rivalry," he said.

Bowman, who coached the Canadiens to five Stanley cup titles before moving to Buffalo last year, said the Al Arbour-coached Islanders will be a strong opponent.

The Islanders stopped Boston Bruins in five games after getting by Los Angeles Kings in the first round while the Sabres defeated Vancouver Canucks 3-1 and Chicago Black Hawks 4-0.

Meanwile, in Quebec it promises to be a long, hot summer in taverns throughout the province. While the "yes or no" referendum on sovereignty-association will produce an answer, one question will continue to be raised: "Is the dynasty dead?"

This year, the mighty Canadiens are also-rans.

Lions waste no time picking Billy Sims

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Sims, the exceptional halfback from Oklahoma, was picked — as expected — by Detroit Lions today, the No.1 selection in the National Football League's annual college player draft.

The Lions, who shared with San Francisco the worst record in 1979 at 2-14, officially picked the 24-year-old Sims 3½ minutes after NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle called the draft to order.

Sims, the Heisman Trophy winner as a junior and the runner-up to Charles White of Southern California in the balloting for the award as a senior last year, is fast and strong.

"Billy Sims is the greatest player in the country," Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer said before the draft. "I know I have said this before, but he is the greatest clutch player there is.

"There will never be another player like him at Oklahoma . . . he's a million dollars walking around."

Whether he will sign with Detroit is open to question. His agent and the Lions' management have been far apart in contract talks and he has talked about Simms playing in Canada.

That was the route taken by Ohio State linebacker Tom Cousineau, the NFL's No.1 draft pick a year ago when he and the Buffalo Bills couldn't agree on a contract, and he signed with Montreal Alouettes.

The instant the selection was made, Sims appeared on the podium, alternately flashing a victory sign and waving a football as a gallery of fans attending the draft cheered the announcement.

While San Francisco '49ers were pondering their selection, the second in the draft, Sims was ringed by photographers. Two minutes later, he departed — again to cheers — for a news conference.

The '49ers then swapped their pick to New York Jets for the Jets two first-round choices, Nos. 13 and 20 in the opening round. The latter was obtained from Denver in the trade that sent quarterback Matt Robinson to the Broncos.

With the No.2 selection in the first round, the Jets selected Johnny (Lam) Jones, the speedy wide receiver from Texas who won a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics as a member of the U.S. 400-metre relay team.

Cincinnati Bengals, picking third, took 285-pound offensive tackle Anthony Munoz of Southern California. Munoz missed almost all of the 1979 season after undergoing his third knee operation.

Green Bay Packers used little time in selecting defensive tackle Bruce Clark of Penn State, who, like Munoz, required knee surgery last season. Clark was expected to play nose guard in the Packers new 3-4 defence.

Rosie loses Boston victory

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Athletic Association tody stripped Rosie Ruiz of New York of her Boston Marathon women's division victory.

Jacqueline Gareau of Montreal, who was placed second on marathon day, was named winner.

Race Director Will Cloney awarded the No. 1 spot to Gareau, who was on hand at the news conference and accepted Cloney's congratulations.

Cloney said the investigation showed "beyond any reasonable doubt" that Ruiz, a 36-year-old Manhattan office worker who says she had run in only one prior marathon, did not cover the entire 42 kilometres, 195 metres (26-miles, 385-yards) Boston footrace.

"If she did anything wrong, it was on the spur of the moment," Cloney said of Ruiz, adding, "I'm not a doctor, not a psychiatrist.

"I think she believes she ran the race."

"I am proud to be the first," Gareau said.

Ruiz was at work in New York.

Cloney said Ruiz had told him she did not plan to return her gold medal, saying, "I hope that on reflection Rosie would decide it would be the sportsmanlike thing to do."

Cloney said he had invited the New York woman to run in the marathon next year and to vindicate herself.

The decision brings to an apparent end more than a week of questions surrounding the women's division winner.

Ruiz, while claiming to have run the race from start to finish, failed to appear in any race photographs prior to the final mile or so. Cloney said the investigation included checking 10,000 pictures taken along the course.

Tonight in sports

Softball and lacrosse highlight live sports action for Victoria fans tonight while National Hockey League playoff action tops the television fare.

In the Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League, New York, New York meets Tillicum Shoppers Drug Mart and Victoria Athletics tackle McDonald Furniture Juniors at 6:30 in Hyacinth Park.

At the same time, Macdonald Park Men's Softball League games pit Labatts against Mega-Power and Coast Projects against Trafalgar Legion at Macdonald Park.

Esquimalt Legion of the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League faces South Vancouver Island Senior "B" League All-Stars in an exhibition game at 8 in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The opening game of the NHL semi-final series between New York Islanders and Buffalo Sabres will be televised at 5 on Channels 2 and 6.

'Look ahead' seems bright for Cougars

By ERNIE FEDORUK

The Prairie always has been "next year" country but now that Regina Pats have won the Western Hockey League championship, Victoria Cougars are free to utilize the look-ahead honor.

Regina's triumph over the Cougars, a disrespectful five-game bounce in the best-of-seven series, is a big disappointment to coach Jack Shupe and most of the Victoria players. It stings, but the hurt should not last much beyond the end of summer.

Much will depend on what National Hockey League clubs plan for any under-age players drafted, but 1980-81 could be as successful as the past one for the Cougars. It will not be much of a rebuilding year for Shupe, barring the unexpected.

Strength will return in goal, on defence and at centre, and the Cougars again should loom as strong contenders.

Definitely moving on is right winger Bob Smith. The team's over-age player this season, Smith can not return for a second tenure in that capacity.

Five other players have passed their 19th birthday and therefore have ended their junior eligibility. They are wingers Bob Jansch, Greg Adams and Randy Zinn, goaltender Kevin Eastman and defenceman Mark Robinson. It is possible one of the five may return as next year's overage performer, if rules allow it.

If there is any worry about next season for Shupe, it concerns centre Barry Pederson, wingers Brad Palmer and Torrie Robertson and defenceman Len Dawes. The four are Victoria's brightest offerings for the under-age draft, especially Pederson, who counted 52 goals and 88 assists to finish third in the individual scoring race.

If all return, then Shupe will start with a nucleus that will be the envy of all rivals.

It will start in goal, with Grant Fuhr. Dawes, Tony Feltrin, Robert Jacobson and Bob McGill return on defence with Jerry Heikkala, called up from tier two ranks for the WHL playoffs, as the logical fifth man.

Pederson, Mark Morrison and Grant Rezansoff are returning centres while Palmer, Robertson, Dan Deschenes, Daryl Coldwell and Bud McCarthy are returning wingers. And there seems to be no question that 16-year-old Paul Cyr, another pickup for the playoffs, will have no problem earning a starting spot.

Unfortunately, Shupe can no longer count on John Newberry, the Nanaimo Clippers' centre who set a B.C. Junior League scoring record with 185 points, including 84 goals, this season. The 18-year-old Saanich product this week agreed to a four-year scholarship at the University of Wisconsin.

Several of the Cougars, who returned home Monday, didn't hide their disappointment over losing to Regina.

"I don't think we had the series we're capable of having," said Eastman before leaving Regina. "(The team) didn't play as well as we can. The Pats are good, but the series still should have gone seven games."

Cougars, said Pederson, lost the series in Victoria. "Those first games did it," he said. "If we win our first two at home, we would have won the series."

Fuhr, who was disappointing in the third and fourth games (which Regina won 4-3 and 7-1), suffered a dislocated shoulder Saturday night and forced Regina coach Bryan Murray to look around for another standby goalie for the Memorial Cup final.

"We were definitely interested in Fuhr," said Murray, "but we now have to see who now is available to back up (Bart) Hunter."

Advertising pays off for Padre shortstop

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Advertising pays off, says San Diego Padres shortstop Ozzie Smith.

Smith took out a little classified ad last week under the heading Positions Wanted in a local newspaper.

Today, he's got a side job that pays $500 weekly, plus commissions, as the year-round sales representative of an unidentified Los Angeles company.

The details were worked out by Smith's agent, who has complained publicly about the $72,500 salary paid the third-year player by the Padres. Smith has $84,000 in debts, his agent said.

"It means I won't have to take a leave of absence from baseball," Smith said of his second job.

Golf fan's study of obvious may differ in player's eyes

Even on golf courses, things are not always what they seem to be.

I missed watching Dave Mick play the 16th hole at Uplands but Friendly Observer came around to say, flat out, that the defending champion in the Vancouver Island Open was lucky.

"Hit a bad tee shot into the woods," Friendly Observer said, "then pulled off an amazing shot . . . rolled it to a couple of feet from the cup for a 'gimme' birdie and won the hole."

Rival Brian DeGirolamo went one down, and that was how the Sunday match finished.

Mick did not consider his second shot on 16 as a miracle recovery.

"When I checked the green in the morning, I knew the pin was on the front left of the green. On the tee, I didn't worry about the trees (on the right of the fairway) because I felt I had a chance to do something from that side of the fairway," he said.

"I figured I had a better chance from that side than from where Brian was, on the left."

DeGirolamo confirms that he was confronted with a more difficult approach. His second wound up at the extreme back of the green and, after missing his second putt, Brian conceded Mick the 1½-foot birdie putt.

Mick's drive did wind up among trees, but he had an open path to the pin. Mick's approach, however, had to be kept low.

"I could see the flag, but not the hole. I just wanted to play for my (par) four and was surprised when I saw where the ball wound up," said Mick.

Spectators play the game differently than good players. The fan, generally, can not see a shot beyond his own capability. A player like Mick is capable of hitting the low, running shot, whereas the same stroke would not be considered by the fan.

The comparison between a the spectator's game and the player's can be carried to the 18th.

"The spectator probably thought I had an easy shot to the 18th green. But that approach from the left rough was far more difficult than my second on 16. Again, it was a low shot. I had to hit a low four iron 140 yards. Normally, I hit a four iron 190 yards.

"Granted, I just missed the green but it was a good shot for me."

Mick's recovery chip was a shade too strong but he dropped the eight-foot putt for the half that clinched his victory over DeGirolamo.

The point was made. That which seems easy or difficult in the eyes of the beholder does not have to be easy or difficult for the player.

Umpire killed in softball shootup

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — A softball coach was charged with murder Monday in the shooting death of an umpire, Greenville County authorities said.

Lieutenant Earl Barnett of the Greenville County sheriff's department said Willie Lee Spurgeon, 44, was charged in the killing of Raymond L. Dawkins, 52.

Barnett said the shooting occurred at a softball game between members of two communities, Laurel Creek and Fountain Inn. The game was being played in a park at Laurel Creek just outside the Greenville city limits.

"We don't understand what the call was or who it was against," the spokesman said. "The beginnings of this thing are very hazy."

Barnett and other officials said the incident Saturday night went like this:

An umpire, but apparently not Dawkins, made a disputed call and an unidentified man ran onto the field with a knife. Spurgeon, who was in a dugout, pulled a pistol.

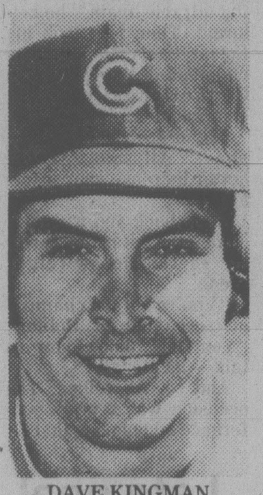
A fight ensued, with shots exchanged.

During the fight, Spurgeon himself was shot in the hip, and his pants fell off when the bullet hit him, authorities said.

Meanwhile, someone attacked James E. Thompson, 36, of Greenville, with a baseball bat, beating him on the head and shoulders. He was listed in satisfactory condition at Greenville General Hospital Monday with head, face and shoulder injuries.

Authorities said Thompson was playing second base and had pulled a gun during the melee. His sister, Debbie Carter, said Thompson did not play softball and was standing on the sidelines.

She said no one could talk with Thompson, who has a broken jaw, broken shoulder bones, a broken nose and has not fully regained consciousness.



DAVE KINGMAN
. . . a big man

Kingman's arm and bat power Chicago victory

By Canadian Press

Dave Kingman didn't hit any home runs Monday night but he was a big man for Chicago Cubs anyway . . . and not just because he stands 6-foot-6.

The tall left fielder, known for his towering home runs and wild-swinging strikeouts, threw out St. Louis's speedy Garry Templeton trying to score from second base on a single by Keith Hernandez in the third inning.

That preserved a 1-1 tie and it remained that way until the ninth inning when Kingman slapped a pitch from Bob Sykes into centre field for a tie-breaking run scoring single that sparked a three-run uprising as the Cubs defeated the Cardinals 4-2 in a National League baseball game Monday.

"He's the complete ballplayer now," manager Preston Gomez said of Kingman. "He beats you with his bat, he can run, he can throw and he can field."

Only three games were played in the majors while four were rained out — Atlanta Braves-San Diego Padres in the National League and New York Yankees-Baltimore Orioles, Boston Red Sox-Chicago White Sox and Kansas City Royals-Toronto Blue Jays in the American League.

In American League action, Oakland A's made it 5-for-5 over California by blanking the Angels 8-0 while Seattle Mariners defeated Minnesota Twins, 6-4.

As usual, Kingman wasn't available to the media but other Cubs didn't mind talking about him.

"When the game's on the line and he's up, you better watch him," said relief ace Bruce Sutter, who picked up his sixth save. "When he first came up, he used to swing at everything.

"He's cut down on his strike zone. He knows what he wants up there now."

Ivan DeJesus opened the Cubs' ninth with a walk and Bill Buckner bunted safely before Kingman singled. Jerry Martin then greeted Donnie Moore with an RBI double and Tim Blackwell added a sacrifice fly.

Tony Armas, Dwayne Murphy and Dave Revering homered to support Rick Langford's seven-hitter for Oakland. Langford, 2-0, was making only his second start of the season and struck out four.

The Twins committed seven errors and two by pitcher Terry Felton and left fielder Ken Landreaux led to a five-run Seattle fourth inning.

Rick Honeycutt allowed seven hits in 6 1-3 innings to raise his record to 4-0.

T-Birds to stage soccer tourney

So successful was the 18th annual Totem All-Native Soccer Tournament staged on Easter weekend that the Indian players have decided to do it all again — without waiting for next year and the 19th event!

Victoria T-Birds, runners-up for the men's title in the Easter contest, plan to stage the first annual Thunderbird Soccer Tournament in Victoria May 17, 18 and 19.

Although all entries won't be confirmed until May 4, it will be an international tournament with teams coming from Washington State, Saskatchewan, the Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island.

Sliammon Sounders of Powell River, who won the Totem Tournament but needed a series of penalty shots to edge the T-Birds 2-1 in the final after a full 90 minutes plus overtime failed to snap the tie, will take part in the men's competition which will be played at Victoria High School.

Limited to native sides, the men's event will also feature Duncan United, Saanich Islanders and, of course, the T-Birds.

The women's event will be played at S.J. Willis Junior High School and will involve eight senior teams but it won't be limited to native squads.

"The T-Birds team, which won the women's title in the Totem tourney, will play along with several other native teams," explains Andy Nelson of the Thunderbirds. "But we decided to open the women's event to other clubs as well in order to get an even higher calibre of play."

Three victories in two days

Pam Jones earned her third victory in the two-day-old Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League season Monday, pitching Island Dryco Breakers to a 7-5 decision over New York, New York at Hyacinth Park.

In another game, Bemister's Welding topped Butler Bros., 9-4.

Jones, who had pitched her club to a pair of wins Sunday, struck out four, scattered seven hits and issued six walks on the way to Monday's triumph.

Kathy McHarg helped Breakers at the plate with two hits in three trips, including a three-run triple in the sixth inning which provided the winning run.

Marilyn Bolton pitched a four-hitter while Cathy Ross doubled and tripled to drive in two runs for Bemister's.

In the Macdonald Men's League, Mayfair Insurance tripped Saints 11-3 while James Bay Inn and Rebels battled to a 5-5 tie at Macdonald Park.

Brentwood tops regatta

MILL BAY — Crews from Brentwood College won 17 of the 26 events to easily take first place in the school's annual spring rowing regatta Sunday.

Competing in glorious sunny weather, Brentwood collected a total of 106 points to finish well ahead of second-place Shawnigan Lake Boys' School with 59 points and third-place Lakeside School of Seattle with 46. Fourth over-all in the boys' events was a group of junior rowers from the Greenlake Club in Seattle with 25 points and West Vancouver High School was fifth with 8 points.

Brentwood College also topped the girls' events but had a much tougher time doing it, finishing with 43 points to 38 for second-place Lakeside of Seattle. Hillside School of West Vancouver was third with 9 points and Cowichan High School (rowing out of the Maple Bay Club) was fourth with 4 points.

Included in Brentwood's victories was a very easy win by the school's highly-rated varsity eight of David Young, David Ross, Tim Burley, Dennis Carlson, Tim Christian, Graham Horn, Harold Backer, Eric Sorensen and cox Rory Carr. The crew, which Brentwood rowing coach Tony Carr hopes to take over for the big Royal Henley Regatta in England in July, was first in 4 minutes, 45 seconds. Lakeside was second in 5:01 and Shawnigan Boys' School was third in 5:10.

Brentwood's other wins were in the varsity fours, junior varsity fours, lightweight eights, bantamweight singles, colt fours, junior varsity eights, bantamweight eights, lightweight singles, novice eights, varsity pairs, novice fours, varsity singles and colt eights, all boys' events, and the varsity eights, varsity fours and novice fours in girls' events.

Of the remaining nine events, Lakeside won six and Shawnigan Boys' School took three.

Wych upsets Irish ace

SHEFFIELD, England (Reuter) — Jim Wych of Vancouver, a 100-1 outsider, qualified for the quarter-finals of the world professional snooker championship with a 13-10 win Monday over Dennis Taylor of Northern Ireland.

Wych now moves to the quarter-finals against former-Victorian Cliff Thorburn, who advanced with a 13-10 decision over Welshman Doug Mountjoy.

Unseeded Kirk Stevens of Toronto held a 5-3 lead over Australian Eddie Charlton after the opening session of their quarter-final match.

England's David Taylor earned a quarter-final berth by beating Fred Davis of England 13-5.

In a match that finished today, Ray Reardon of Britain overcame Bill Werbeniuk of Winnipeg 13-6 and also moved into the quarter-finals.

It was Ali who signed, they knew by his voice

NEW YORK (AP) — His face was round and puffy and the moustache looked almost out of place. But it was Muhammad Ali, all right. You could tell from his voice.

"I am the miracle man and I'm getting ready to do the miracle again," he bellowed. Then he shook his fist at Larry Holmes, the undefeated World Boxing Council heavyweight champion.

"I got speed and endurance," Ali said. "You'd better increase your insurance."

Ali is back and with him comes the return of rhetoric to the heavyweight scene.

"You're not the champ," he screamed at Holmes. "You don't know how to talk — let me talk."

And so, Ali talked. The occasion was a news conference announcing that Ali will return to the ring for a July 11 title bout against Holmes in Rio de Janeiro. It was a raucous, circus-like scene. It was vintage Ali.

Urged on by Bundini Brown, his aide de camp and personal guru, Ali clowned throughout, mimicking Holmes, shadow boxing occasionally to show that he's still lightning fast, and generally dominating the room.

He will get $8 million for the fight, co-promoted by Don King Productions and Prime Sports, which is headed by former Ali bodyguard Murad Muhammad. Holmes will receive $4 million.

"He deserves everything he's getting, because this is the last time he's getting it," Holmes said with a snort. "Ali is a great man and a great fighter.

"I learned a lot from him. But I think he'll learn from me now."

While Holmes spoke, Ali started snoring — loudly. Then the ex-champ exploded.

"Your talking is putting us all to sleep," he roared. "You're killing the people here.

"The whole thing is dying. It's dying soon as you start talking."

Holmes was hardly disturbed by the interruption by Ali, which included some good old, fashioned table pounding and encouragement from Bundini.

Ali, 38, has not fought since regaining the heavyweight crown from Leon Spinks on Sept. 15, 1978. His weight has balooned, but he insists he's not concerned at all.

"You won't believe me, but I'm in shape right now," he said. "I wouldn't come back if I thought I would lose.

"If I thought there was the least chance I'd lose, I'd stay away. But I saw him fight Mike Weaver and Leroy Jones and I said, 'I got it made.'"

Now Ali was warmed up. He began punching at the air, popping lefts and rights this way and that.

Does Holmes, unbeaten in 34 professional fights, think Ali can still fight?

"I think he's got a half a one left," the champion began.

"That's all he needs for you, chump," cried Brown from the back of the room.

It was Ali's turn again. He knew there were doubters in the room, people who feel he's too old to be fighting.

"If I tell you a mosquito can pull a plow, don't ask how. Just hitch him up."

Search for tennis talent

Thirty of the Lower Island's youthful racquet enthusiasts took part last weekend in a B.C. Tennis Association "Search for Talent" clinic on the indoor courts at the Cedar Hill Recreation Centre bubble.

Ranging in age from 10 to 15, the youngsters were put through their paces by Vancouver pro Dave Johnston of the North Shore Winter Club assisted by Oak Bay's municipal tennis co-ordinator Roger Skillings and Racquet Club of Victoria pro Russ Hartley.

Clinics under the plan, devised by B.C.'s official coach Ian Brady (former pro at the now-defunct Island Indoor Tennis Centre and now at Lions Gate Club in Vancouver) were held simultaneously on the Lower Mainland.

The young players were observed hitting forehand and backhand groundstrokes, serving and volleying. The most promising will be invited to take part in further trials at Richmond's Western Indoor Tennis Club May 3 and 4.

"This is the first year we've tried this," explained Johnston after the clinic. "The idea is to get as many names of good young players as we can for consideration when picking future Team B.C. and Challenger (backup squads) teams in the under-12, under-14, under-16 and under-18 age groups."

Late goal saves Liverpool

LONDON (Reuter) — Scottish international Kenny Dalglish kept alive Liverpool's hopes for an English League and Football Association Cup double by scoring a tying goal in injury time of Monday's FA Cup soccer replay against Arsenal. His goal took the match into extra time but the additional 30 minutes failed to change the 1-1 score.

The two teams, who have battled a total of 5½ hours to decide who meets West Ham in the final on May 10, will replay again at Coventry on Thursday.

Arsenal's goal by Ian Sunderland came after only 15 seconds of play.

Selectors pick nine Islanders

VANCOUVER — Nine players from the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association were selected for the British Columbia team training squad following a provincial tournament that was concluded Sunday.

Islanders picked for the squad were Cindy James, Joanne Griffin, Diane Nahy, Mary Cavin, Gail Hoskin, Sue Taylor, Sarah Angus, Carrie Crookshank and Shelley Winter.

Island I recorded four shutouts in the no-winner tournament. The team tripped Okanagan 6-0 and Vancouver II 2-0 on Sunday after beating Burnaby I 2-0 and Vancouver I 1-0 on Saturday.

Crookshank and James each scored twice against Okanagan while singles were added by Cavin and Angus. Stephanie Doney and James scored against Vancouver II. Doney and Angus fired the goals on Burnaby I and Doney connected for the lone goal against Vancouver I.

Island II fared differently. Vancouver II downed the Island II 1-0 on a penalty stroke after the Islanders had topped Okanagan 3-1 on goals by Hoskin (2) and Taylor.

On Saturday, Island II nipped West Vancouver 4-3 after playing to a 4-4 deadlock with Vancouver III.

Hoskin scored all four goals against Vancouver III and chalked up a single along with Liz Munn, Liz Callaway and Taylor against West Vancouver.

Brooks waits for NHL offer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Olympic hockey coach Herb Brooks says he has agreed to coach the Swiss team, H.C. Davos, provided he does not get an offer from a National Hockey League club before June 1.

Brooks said the job in Davos would make him the "fourth highest-paid coach in all of hockey."

American rider takes Cup event

BALTIMORE (CP) — Conrad Homseld of the United States won World Cup of equestrian show jumping Sunday, finishing the three-day event with 47½ points.

He finished with a clear lead over compatriot Melannie Smith (44½) and West German Paul Schockemohle (42).

Dionne again selected Pearson Award winner

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League Players Association announced Monday that Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings has won the Lester Pearson Award for the second year in a row.

Dionne received 147 votes, 33 more than Wayne Gretzky of Edmonton Oilers. Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens and Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks were tied for third with 35 votes each.

The award is presented in memory of the former prime minister, who had a lifelong interest in hockey.

The Pearson award is voted on by members of the players association and Dionne was chosen by his peers as "the player who contributed most to hockey in the 1979-80 season."

Former winners include Lafleur, Bobby Orr, Bobby Clark, Phil Esposito and Jean Ratelle

Star loses finger

SOUTHAMPTON (CP) — Charlie George, Southampton and former England soccer star, is making a good recovery after losing a finger in an accident with a lawn mower. George transferred from Derby last year for $770,000.

Title clinched

ROME (AP) — With two more rounds to go, Internazionale of Milan Sunday clinched its 12th Italian major league soccer championship by playing to a 2-2 draw against Roma.

National meet for swimmers at Crystal Pool

Some of the world's best swimmers will be in Victoria for the Canadian national synchronized swimming championships May 5 to 10 at the Crystal Pool.

Around 200 competitors from across Canada will be bidding for the four titles at stake — solo, duet, team and figures — and a special exhibition routine will be performed by former world solo, duet and figures champion, Helen Vandenburg.

Mair's ward assessed

VANCOUVER (CP) — An emotionally disturbed youth who was going to be sent directly to Health Minister Rafe Mair unless a suitable place could be found for him, now will go to an assessment home in Burnaby.

Family Court Judge Harry Boyle, upset by the lack of facilities in such cases, had threatened to have the 16-year-old escorted to the minister if the boy couldn't be helped soon.

Following a court hearing Monday, Boyle said the youth would be sent to the Maples, the B.C. Youth Development Centre's residential unit in Burnaby, which provides treatment for juveniles in an open setting.

The boy was given a place at the centre despite a waiting list of six months to a year.

The centre is not designed for emotionally disturbed adolescents who must be confined.

The judge said there is some fear that the boy, who is charged with threatening his father, may be suicidal.

Boyle said that if the assessment at the Maples finds the boy can't be treated there, officials will have to start anew to find him a place.

Boyle said the youth will stay at the forensic psychiatric institute in Port Coquitlam, where he has been for a month, while awaiting his Wednesday appointment at the Maples.

Forensic officials have said the institute is "certainly not an appropriate place for him, or any other adolescent."

b.c. briefs

Slap likely due copter pilot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Transport Canada says it likely will discipline a helicopter pilot who reportedly obstructed recovery of wreckage of a light plane from a lake-bottom when he flew a television news crew into the area.

The incident, involving a Transwest Helicopters Ltd. pilot, came to light at an inquest last week into the deaths of pilot David Waddington, 24, and his passenger Steven Haupert, 25, both of Scarborough, Ont. Their single-engine plane crashed into Pitt Lake near Maple Ridge on Feb. 21.

RCMP Constable Mike Ferguson told the inquest the helicopter's movements caused the search team to lose the wreck's location when it dropped off a BCTV news team.

He said the helicopter touched one of its skidders down on the diving tender boat, pushing it away from the wreckage site. He added that it took searchers two days to relocate the plane.

He said the helicopter should have stayed away from the vessel because it was displaying a diving flag.

Murder charge laid

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — A charge of first-degree murder has been laid in the death of convenience store clerk Shirley Yablonski of this Fraser Valley city.

The 40-year-old mother of three disappeared Aug. 3, 1979, from the store where she worked.

Charged is Terrence Harrison, 27, who is being held at the regional psychiatric centre in nearby Matsqui, where he is serving a sentence for another crime.

Cominco bars pickets

TRAIL (CP) — Cominco Ltd. has applied to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for a cease-and-desist order to halt picketing which has disrupted its operation here.

Up to 600 workers were believed to be off the job.

Some members of the United Steelworkers of America set up a picket line at the lead-zinc smelter's main gate Monday to protest a number of issues, including job progression, attendance improvement and special appraisal programs.

The union executive is not endorsing the job action.

Sheriff impersonated

SURREY (CP) — A National Harbors Board policeman has been charged with impersonating a deputy sheriff.

Sgt. Hunter Scott, 48, of Delta, will appear in provincial court May 2 to have a trial date set.

Scott, an NHB policeman for 11 years, has been suspended without pay pending disposition of the case.

Upswing for forestry

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The B.C. forest industry will experience an upswing in a few months which will take it through to the next decade, says Jack Munro, western regional president of the International Woodworkers of America.

Munro said he bases his optimism on the expectation that members of the postwar baby boom will be settling down and wanting to own their own homes, which represents potential housing starts of at least 250,000.

The union leader also said he believes U.S. President Jimmy Carter will release about $10 billion this year to encourage home ownership in the United States and B.C. will be called on to supply lumber to the American market.

Muckamuck talks fail

VANCOUVER (CP) — An attempt to resume negotiations in the protracted Muckamuck restaurant strike collapsed amid acrimony Monday when management backed out at the last minute, saying it feared picketing by anti-union employees.

THE ORDER IS OUT:

REDUCE STOCK NOW!

The order is out!!! Jerry Rosen, A & B Sound's Comptroller, is generally a nice, normal guy — except at YEAR END. At Year End, he growls and prowls the hall, grumbling about high inventory levels, too many demos and how much there is to count. With all the models we carry and the stacks of back-up inventories, Jerry has a lot to count and he's not happy. That's why we're holding our gigantic Pre-inventory Sale with prices so low that we're practically giving the stuff away! I mean, we want the stock reduced drastically!! So head to A & B Sound today and check out the bargains. You'll love Jerry's prices.

Before the judge

An 18-year-old woman was jailed for nine days Monday after pleading guilty in provincial court to causing a disturbance in a downtown all-night restaurant early Friday.

The court was told Dee Chorney of no fixed address had used abusive language, wrote an obscenity across the restaurant window and tossed a beer bottle at it.

Her counsel refuted a claim by prosecutor Nick Laughton that his client made her living as a prostitute. He further argued that her language was not all together out of place at that time of the morning in such an establishment.

The court was told that Chorney was on probation for a January breach of probation conviction and was awaiting trial on a theft-related charge.

"This is the third and fourth conviction under this section," Judge Blake Allan told an Alberta man who pleaded guilty to two 1976 charges of impaired driving.

He sentenced David Caswell, 37, of Rocky Mountain House, to 30 and 45 days concurrent on the two charges arising out of separate incidents in Sidney several days apart in July 1976.

He was arrested in Leduc last Tuesday on the outstanding 1976 warrants and was detained in custody until his Victoria court appearance.

The court was told Caswell had two previous drinking-driving convictions, the last of which was just over a year ago. At that time, he had initiated the waiving of the Sidney charges to Alberta and assumed by the size of the fine imposed then that those charges were included.

"Well, this is the fourth time," Judge Allan told a 24-year-old man who pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of marijuana laid following a March 20 search of his downtown hotel room.

Robert Beloin of Edmonton had been sentenced to one day in jail for a similar conviction last month.

This time he was sent away for 12 days.

The following were convicted of drinking-driving charges:

Stanley Vowles, 19, no address available, $300; Daniel Roy McDonagh, 21, of 224 Michigan, $400; Delmar Johnny, 33, of Duncan, $450; Paul Hagen, 37, of Parksville, $150

$350,000 aid to conservatory

The Victoria Conservatory of Music has received a $350,000 grant from the provincial government-controlled lottery funds to cover the cost of renovating new facilities at St. Ann's Academy.

The grant was announced Monday by Finance Minister Hugh Curtis and Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe, minister responsible for lotteries.

The grant is in addition to $132,000 already awarded to the conservatory to cover the first year's rent at the academy.

Ailing jurors offered vitamins

Defence lawyer Josiah Wood Monday offered a massive dose of vitamin C to help jurors cope with a flu bug that keeps postponing the trial of the Tofino 23.

A trial involving 23 men accused of importing 33.5 tons of marijuana near Tofino last year was to have resumed after two earlier postponements when jurors were struck down by influenza and further delay caused when counsel was required in another court.

Judge M.L.T. Drake was told the third juror was taken ill Friday and had been confined to her bed over the weekend but was expected to be well enough for reappearance Tuesday.

"The accused are healthy, I'm healthy, what's the matter with the jury?" Drake asked. Then he asked whether counsel wished to make any applications.

"I have a briefcase full of vitamin C, if that will be any good," Wood replied.

The trial was adjourned to 10 a.m. today.

Red Shield set to roll

The $250,000 Red Shield Appeal of the Salvation Army officially opens at noon Thursday in Centennial Square.

The Canadian armed forces' Naden band will parade to the square along Douglas at 11:30 a.m. The mayors of the four core municipalities will attend a flag-raising ceremony.

George Easdon is chairman of this year's campaign, which will continue throughout May.

In the Greater Victoria area there will be a door-to-door canvass on Monday, May 5, when 3,000 canvassers will call at 30,000 homes.

Heading other Red Shield divisions are John H. Wade, Michael C. Manning, Ken King, Dr. Scott Wallace and Maurice Frost.

Mrs. Janet Baird is campaign vice-chairman and Janice Noble is publicity chairman.

The campaign also includes the Gulf Islands, organized by R. Nicolson and the Salt Spring Island Lions' Club, and Duncan, where the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Royal Canadian Legion is in charge of arrangements.

Mail contributions may be sent to campaign director Capt. Bill Merritt at the Salvation Army, 769 Pandora, V8W 1N9.

Oak Bay backs RJH obstetrics

Oak Bay council Monday joined other groups and municipalities opposing the Capital Regional District hospital board's plan to locate an obstetric and pediatric centre in the new Victoria General Hospital on Helmcken Road.

Council was persuaded by Dr. Scott Wallace, who heads a six-man doctors' committee opposing the plan, to pass a motion asking the region to continue obstetric and pediatric facilities now at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Wallace told council he doesn't object to obstetric and pediatric facilities being established at the new hospital.

Ban on MLA wiretap vital, all agree

Socred and NDP members of the legislature's special committee on privilege agreed Monday that MLAs should get the same sort of protection from police wiretaps as lawyers.

That protection prevents wiretapping of lawyer-client communications unless the lawyer himself is suspected of a criminal act.

Committee chairman, Education Minister Brian Smith, and NDP MLA Stuart Leggatt, both lawyers, indicated the probable outcome of the committee's deliberations will be recommendations for changes in federal legislation.

For Leggatt, that admission is something of an embarrassment.

As a federal MP he sat on the committee that studied the federal Privacy Act in detail but failed to deal with the question of protecting elected officials.

"It was an oversight. In retrospect I think we should have examined at the time the protection of privacy for the public seeking to consult with their elected representatives."

The committee on privilege was set up to examine the lengthy wiretapping of Consumer Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen's offices and home, as part of an investigation into attempted bribery charges.

Nielsen himself was never implicated but all his telephone calls and conversations were intercepted by the RCMP for more than a year.

Several members expressed concern that their constituents no longer feel they can speak with them freely, as a result of the Nielsen bugging.

The committee voted to invite Joe Maingot, parliamentary counsel in Ottawa and an expert on the complicated issue of privilege, to come to Victoria to testify.

The veteran clerk of the legislature, Ian Horne, provided committee members with a seven-page interpretation of the ancient rules governing privilege and contempt of parliament.

He indicated that, in his opinion, the committee would be wiser to deal with the Nielsen case as a question of contempt rather than privilege.

Leggatt argued, however, it would be safer to establish a breach of privilege than seek a contempt ruling and the matter was left unresolved.

The penalty for either contempt or breach of privilege is the same. The legislature, while not able to impose fines, can order an offender jailed virtually indefinitely.

However committee chairman Smith said the house would not want to punish the police officers involved in the Nielsen wiretap because they were just doing their job.

"Our concern is to establish privilege, not exact punishment," he said.

The promises of Attorney-General Allan Williams leave NDP MLA Karen Sanford cold.

The member from Comox told the legislature Monday Williams promised last January to undertake a review of foreign land ownership in B.C.

But now she says she has learned that the documents containing that information are still gathering dust in the land titles office. No one has looked at them for the past four years.

"The government hasn't done a thing," Sanford said.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, who mentioned three weeks ago that he had ordered a similar survey, said his staff will co-ordinate their efforts with the attorney-general's ministry.

Sanford told reporters that agrologists in the Peace River, in a survey of their own, have determined the absentee German investors are buying up large tracts of farmland.

Rip-out wasn't a rip-off Chabot tells legislature

Housing Minister Jim Chabot Monday defended the granting of provincial low-interest mortgage funds to a builder who ripped out concrete footings in Port Hardy in order to qualify.

NDP MLA Colin Gabelmann (North Island) suggested April 16 that Hartshorne Construction was manipulating the regulations under the provincial government's new Housing Initiative Program.

In a lengthy response, Chabot told the legislature the final decision on the company's qualification rested solely with the Saanich Peninsula Savings Credit Union.

The credit union approved the loan on condition that the old footings be ripped out and fresh construction begin following the Jan. 15 start of the Housing Initiative program, he said.

Although the original footings were approved by the local building inspector, they were inadequate for the 52-unit apartment complex and more substantial footings were needed, Chabot added.

The minister said he is satisfied the entire matter was properly handled.

Trees much better than oil: gov't film

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia may be facing serious timber shortages but it is better off to have trees rather than oil as its major resource, says a new film commissioned by the ministry of forests for public release.

"Long after the Arabs have dug their last drop of oil, we're still going to have trees," Bill Young, chief forester, said in the film.

The United Nations says the world is losing its forest land at a rate of 30 million acres a year and 50 per cent of the world's timber is firewood, said Young.

"The erosion of the land base at this fantastic rate leaves me with some pessimism for the world even though it leaves me with optimism for B.C."

The 30-minute, $40,000 film, called The Falldown Effect, was made for the ministry by freelance filmmaker Mike Halleran, a former member of CBC television's agriculture and resources department.

The fim was released earlier this month as a follow-up to publication of B.C. Forest Service's forest and range resource analysis report. The report said that, in some area of B.C., there are only enough trees to sustain current cutting levels for five years.

However, the service says it confident a five-year silviculture and reforestation program costing $1.4 billion will help make up most of the forecasted deficits by the year 2000.

The film said a timber supply shortage is coming because the forest land base has been eroded by many competing land uses. But intensive forestry — spacing, fertilization, thinning and forest genetics — can ease the crisis.

The falldown effect occurs when demand for timber outstrips supply. The film warns that if forest management is not greatly improved, there could be an average drop of one-third in current timber production in the province.

The film said the timber shortage looms because B.C.'s first-growth forests, massive old trees with a huge volume of wood, almost all have been logged, except for those protected in parks. The second-growth forest is younger and smaller trees containing much less wood.

"The old stockpile was a gift from nature but we won't have it next time around," says the film.

From 1950 to 1970, forest harvesting in B.C. increased 300 per cent with a subsequent boom in new towns, jobs and mills. Forest managers then faced demands in the 1960s for a clean environment with allowance for wilderness, fishing and parks, all of which had to be met with one land base.

The film also says only 50 per cent of B.C. has trees and that most of the rest is snow, rock, grassland and water.

"Today over 20 per cent of our timber harvest is coming from three per cent of our forest land which is good site forest land," says Young in the film.

He said the B.C. forest industry cannot remain competitive if it tries to carry out intensive forestry on remote, steep sites.

Huge coal deal months away?

B.C. may now be only months away from signing a major coal deal with Japan that would trigger massive development of the province's north-east coal fields, Industry Minister Don Phillips said Monday.

"One of the major problems we have to overcome, however, is the transportation end of the deal," he said.

"The competition from Australia, the U.S., China and Russia is severe," he said.

"Australian coal fields are only one-sixth of the distance from Japan that the B.C. fields are — and Japan buys 60 million tons of coal a year from Australia, compared with about 12 million tons from B.C."

Phillips said he has completed a series of meetings with Japanese steel industry representatives, the B.C. Railway board of directors and executives of the Canadian National Railway.

"The coal deal with Japan now looks more positive that it has in the last three years," he said.

The contract would clear the way for the development of the coal-fields in the north-eastern area of the province and a major upgrading of the rail line system, Phillips said.

This would also provide better shipping facilities for grain, lumber, potash and other products of western Canada.

"When we build a steel mill in B.C., it will be ensured of an abundant supply of metallurgical coal, because the mines will be in production and the infrastructure in place."

Jurors condemn hemlock

The provincial government should take steps to stamp out the poison hemlock plant which killed a five-year-old girl earlier this month, a coroner's jury said Monday night.

The jury, inquiring into the April 11 death of Isabelle Yellowknee of 21 Hayward Heights, recommended that the plant be included under the B.C. Weed Control Act.

At present poison hemlock is not mentioned in the act.

The jury found the girl died of hemlock poisoning, respiratory arrest and anoxic brain damage and said the death was accidental.

The girl ate a small amount of the plant April 5 while playing with some children on the grounds of Bishop Cridge Centre for the Family near her home. She died in hospital six days later.

Botanist Adolph Ceska told the jury one mouthful of the leaves of the plant is enough to kill an adult man. There is no known antidote.

Ceska said the plant usually grows on solid-waste disposal sites and garbage dumps and suggested the way of eradicating it is not through herbicides but by destruction of suitable habitats.

Victoria police Constable Randal Thomson showed the jury a three-foot-tall plant that he found growing in Vic West near the Johnson Street Bridge Monday.

Mair set to blast medics for shielding Pickup

The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons can expect a rocket from Health Minister Rafe Mair for over-protecting Alert Bay's Dr. Jack Pickup.

An inquest jury last year found Pickup negligent in the death of an Indian girl but the College cleared him and found him competent to practice.

Now a report issued after a federal inquiry says Pickup is an alcoholic, has been drunk on duty many times and at least two other patients have died because of his errors or neglect.

Mair told the legislature Monday he has sent a telegram to the man who headed the inquiry, Dr. Gary Goldthorpe, asking for the specific evidence on which he based his criticisms of Pickup.

"I intend to bring Dr. Goldthorpe's evidence to the attention of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and of the St. George's Hospital board in Alert Bay, with the strongest possible recommendation that they consider this evidence and take appropriate action."

In the meantime, Mair outlined steps taken to improve the situation in Alert Bay:

—The possible limitation of surgical procedures at St. George's Hospital will be examined immediately.

—Efforts continue to obtain a second doctor for Alert Bay.

—Steps will be taken to ensure adequate native representation in the operation of the community's health facilities.

—Work continues on establishing an alcohol treatment centre in Alert Bay.

—Federal and provincial officials have agreed to work with the local native people towards resolving health care problems.

Mair said this joint effort will be directed at establishing a single health system for the community.

"This will, I hope, serve as a model for the resolution of native health care problems in the province as a whole."

16 tenants plea to stay

Residents of 16 suites in the aging Talbot Apartments at 1354 Beach Drive received eviction notices on Friday giving them until June 30 to leave.

The residents, most of them elderly, appeared before Oak Bay council Monday night and were told the rentalsman's office has extended the eviction order to 120 days.

In addition, council referred a request for a Talbot demolition permit, along with a bylaw which would downzone six aging apartment blocks in the Beach-Currie-Goodwin-Windsor area from five to three-storey developments, to its zoning committee.

The new owner, James Ben-Oliel's Crescent Construction Corporation Ltd., issued the eviction notice after Oak Bay fire chief Fred Leeke, acting as deputy fire commissioner, ordered certain fire safety improvements.

The residents asked council if Ben-Oliel might agree to their suggestions that the rents be increased to help underwrite the estimated $9,000 cost of improvements.

Mayor Doug Watts replied: "Your query rests with the owner of the property."

The council said it will do all it can to stall the eviction and demolition process in view of the rental accommodation shortage.

Ald. Peter Bunn said the previous owner (realtor Pip Holmes and associates) had done about $3,000 of the $12,000 in needed improvements before selling the building, apparently because of a low return on investment.

He said Chief Leeke is dealing with many owners of older apartments in Oak Bay and is trying not to pressure them too much but get the improvements done gradually.

Watts noted Leeke had not ordered the building's demolition, as suggested in the eviction notices, but merely ordered the upgrading of the fire alarm system, emergency lighting, fire escapes and garbage chutes.

Bunn observed: "I find it a terrible situation where for $9,000 you (the tenants) can't stay in a place you like and enjoy."

Mill rate bumped

A tax rate of 47.774 mills to raise $35.65 million locally was approved Monday by School District 61 trustees.

The balance of the $55.67 million budget for 1980 will be provided by the provincial government.

The same rate is levied in each of the four municipalities and one rural area covered by District 61, with the city of Victoria raising the largest dollar share — $16.64 million; Saanich next with $11.96 million; Oak Bay $3.94 million; Esquimalt $2.33 million; unorganized area $766,779.

The mill rate is 1.9 mills higher and assessed property values are 8 per cent higher, at $746.238 million, than in 1979.

Total budget is 11.5 per cent higher than last year.

Jeannie Sakol isn't the first author to lay a broadside into the Hollywood lifestyle, but in her new book, Hot Thirty, she takes umbrage with the New York fashion industry as well. Says she, of the Big Apple's rag merchants, "there are no jobs for models — all they want is Swedish cadavers or Japanese midgets." And of the resulting fashions, she adds, "The North American woman takes one look and wears last year's blue jeans." So much for the new wardrobe.

Kellie Duffin has moved out of the basement and back upstairs to her old job as a savings and loan teller, Bo Derek braids intact. She had been banished to a basement job at First Federal Savings & Loan in Menomonee Falls, Wis., while officials decided what to do about her. Duffin, 18, said she was told earlier this month she had to unravel her $180 hairdo if she wanted to keep her job. But after a news story about the incident, she was assigned to the firm's basement to do microfilm work. Richard Steinberg, her attorney, said an agreement was reached allowing Duffin to resume her duties as a teller. And she will be able to keep the hairdo popularized by actress Derek in the movie 10.

Keeshan

The captain of children's television is worried about the viewing habits of children. Bob Keeshan, known to millions for 25 years as Captain Kangeroo, says he's concerned many parents use television as baby sitters. "Most of our parents . . . on this continent today do not seem to care about the time spent or the programs being viewed by their young people," he said. "The most often spoken words in North America today are not 'I love you,' 'You did well at that,' or 'That's not so bad, go back and try again, you can do it.' No, the most often spoken words we hear in North American households today are 'I'm busy, so watch television.'"

Soviet space scientists have decided we're all alone in the universe — that there are no extraterrestrial civilizations because even though we've sent messages, we've never gotten a reply. N.S. Kardashev says even if aliens were out there to answer, it wouldn't make much difference because an answer would take at least 600,000 years to get here. Says he, "That is no way to have a discussion."

Dear Abby:

Appalled wrote that she was upset because her married daughter planned to let her three-year-old son and 19-year-old unmarried sister witness the birth of her second child. My reply: "There is no better way to learn about the miracle of life than to witness childbirth. I see nothing shocking or immodest about it. A three-year-old should find it a fascinating and educational experience."

The letters are running 100 to one against my answer. Today, a sampling of the pros:

Dear Abby:

My husband and I had our second child naturally. Our daughter, then two years nine months old, witnessed the entire birth, coaching me with, "Push, Mama, push!" It was a truly joyous occasion! If children are informed properly throughout the pregnancy with visual aids (books, films) they will be accepting and knowledgeable about the event. There is no need to hide the truth from a child. To experience reality now is to be unafraid later.

Patricia

I was in a natural childbirth program at our local hospital. My husband and 2½-year-old daughter Sara watched the delivery. The child was told what to expect. My parents also watched, and were moved by it. Nobody got "sick" and we also filmed the whole procedure and we treasure those films. We often watch it together to relive a great moment in our lives. Our children will grow up with respect for the miracle of pregnancy and childbirth as a sacred gift instead of something to get rid of.

C.M. and Family

There is so much more unity in the family that has "birthed" together. When one considers its beginning, no wonder the North American family is disintegrating. Think of it — dis-integrating. Mom is in the recovery room, Dad is pacing the corridor, the baby is in the nursery and the siblings are shuttled off to somewhere else. The family never had a chance; it wasn't even born together.

Patricia Geddes

Our four-year-old son attended childbirth classes with us and also witnessed the birth of his little brother. Because of this experience there has never been any jealousy between the siblings. Childbirth has nothing to do with modesty. And since we all came into the world the same way, why should anyone find it disgusting or loathsome?

Anonymous

You will probably get a lot of mail telling you you're crazy, but here's one for our side. Parents think nothing of telling their children that kittens come from cats, puppies from dogs and chickens from eggs, so why should they say that babies come from "the hospital," "the doctor's bag," or "a cabbage patch"? Children won't make a big deal out of anything unless their parents do. Honesty is always the best policy.

Poles take skin care to the limit

By NINA DARNTON
New York Times

WARSAW — When Helena Rubinstein first appeared in the West, the story goes here, she was a Polish girl with exceptionally beautiful skin and some jars filled with mysterious brews of herbs and creams. The story is perhaps apocryphal, but a walk around the capital city of her homeland shows how seriously Poles take the pursuit of a healthy, youthful appearance.

Warsaw is dotted with "kosmetykas." Behind the gray, uninviting entryways are fully equipped beauty salons that specialize in the care of the skin.

Here a woman can receive a three-hour beauty treatment that includes cleansing, facial massage, hot herbal mask and application of specialized creams made of queen bee's milk, turtle oil or the yolks of quails' eggs — all for under $5. If she wants to spend five hours, and add a manicure, pedicure, foot massage, hair styling and permanent, the price might go as high as 500 zlotys (about $18).

Although most Polish shops open at 11 a.m. and close at 7 p.m., these salons open at 7 a.m. and close at 9 p.m. to accommodate working women.

"It is an interesting place to work," said Ewa Gilewska, a cosmetician at the Izis Salon on Marszalkowska Street, "because in one day all kinds of people in the city come here — secretaries, clerks, factory workers, professionals, ministers' wives." As she spoke her hands were deftly massaging the slightly sagging chin muscles of an aging client.

The Izis Salon has seven full-time cosmeticians, each of whom takes about five clients a day. It operates a factory, where it makes its own line of cosmetics, and a farm, where many of the all-important herbs are grown. There are 22 Izis salons around the city. Two other Polish Government cosmetics concerns, Pollena and Uroda, also run kosmetykas, and there are several private cosmeticians who use a wide variety of products. The result is that almost every major street corner has a facial salon, all doing a thriving business from beauty-conscious Polish women.

Each salon specializes in one or two preparations that are not for sale and that attract clients. At the Izis Salon on Marszalkowska Street the two specialties are the king's mask and Japan mask. The king's mask, whose main ingredient is the milk of the queen bee, is aimed at making the skin more youthful looking. Japan mask, made of the yolks of quails' eggs, is also used to tighten the skin and make its texture more delicate.

A typical treatment begins with about 10 minutes of cool vapor, machine-sprayed onto the face, followed by several minutes under a heat lamp.

"This waters and warms the skin," said Mrs. Gilewska, adjusting the vapor to the correct angle. "It is just like rain and sun for a flower." Next comes an herbal mask covered with a heating pad. The sweet smelling herbs and oil, heated slightly, seep into the skin as the client's chair is placed in a reclining position for about 30 minutes.

The herbal mask is removed with cool creams and replaced by either the king's mask or the Japan mask. This is followed by another 30 minutes of facial massage. Gentle fingers skillfully manipulate the delicate skin around the eyes, relax the muscles of the mouth, strengthen the muscles around the chin. The cosmetician examines the skin for blemishes and removes blackheads and unwanted facial hair. After this, the skin is electrically sterilized to prevent infection. A second electrical treatment, designed to improve circulation, follows.

The grand finale is yet another mask, whose main ingredient is kaolin, used in the manufacture of porcelain. This smoothes and tones the skin. For women over 30 the cleaning is recommended once a month and the massage and masks every week. The cosmeticians will not massage the face of a woman under 30.

"I can hardly wait until I'm old enough to get the massage," said 23-year-old Anna Zych, whose clear rosy complexion had just been freshened by a mask made from the leaves of the linden tree, cranberry juice and chamomile.

Mrs. Gilewska, like all Polish cosmeticians, attended school for two years after high school to qualify for her profession. The study is rigorous, with courses on anatomy, dermatology, chemistry and diagnosis of skin disease. Although each large kosmetyka has a resident dermatologist, cosmeticians must be trained to recognize medical problems.

Student trainees assist in the salons, but do not give massages until the second year, and then only under supervision. The students have the opportunity to practice on a full range of skin types and problems, as the ages of clients range from around 12 to 70. Adolescent boys and girls with skin problems come for regular cleansings.

Magazine survey shows who's buying the knicks

LONDON (CP) — It may be a long time before the bottom falls out of the industry, but a survey shows that the average British man is less than enthusiastic about buying his underwear.

The average man buys three new pairs of "knickers" a year, says the May issue of Women's World magazine, and 49 per cent of all men's pants are bought by women.

"Left to their own devices, our men would probably keep one pair going for a decade or so," the magazine says.

And, clinging to the much-heralded cool British reserve, those young male Brits aren't big on purple, vermilion or bottle-green knickers but prefer to stay with traditional white.

The survey shows women are just as keen on white undies as men, but "if a woman's unadventurous in her choice of undies, her man invariably is too."

London ladies appear to be the most knicker-happy women in Britain, says the survey. They buy seven new pairs a year.

Bikini briefs are gaining popularity throughout the country, but "even in these liberated days, waist-high pants account for half of all the knicker sales in Britain.

"While it's clear that the farther north you go, the higher the elastic line gets, in the southwest, the statistics get so bewildering that, frankly, we almost get our knickers in a twist."

While two per cent of men's knickers are still the long-john, ankle-length variety, briefs are beginning to catch up.

"The old-fashioned boxer shorts sadly lag behind, which only goes to show that while most men would willingly swap their body for John Conteh (a Charles Atlas look-alike?) they'll hang on to their own style of knickers, please."

Fatigue is the body's call for respect

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Sometimes I can barely drag myself out of bed in the morning. Even after a good night's sleep it's hard for me to get going. My neighbors do as much as I do with their children and the house, but they don't seem to suffer the exhaustion I do. I've had a general examination. There doesn't seem to be anything wrong with me. Now, I'm afraid it might be that a cancer is lurking somewhere. Could that be possible?

Mrs. K.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

Since your physical examination failed to show any evidence of cancer or any other disease, it's unrealistic to associate your fatigue with a grave illness.

Yet, chronic fatigue is an important symptom and must not be overlooked. It cannot be casually disregarded, even if the person seems to be in complete good health. The emotional tension of hour-by-hour solutions of the problems of children and of running a household can be enormously taxing to some people. When one stops to realize the endless obligations in an average day's work, it's remarkable that more people don't have your complaint.

What is the answer? Are your friends better organized? Are they less compulsive about getting every tiny thing done? Do they indulge themselves in a period of rest during the day? Do their spouses share some of the workload? Some homemakers feel guilty about imposing on their partners some of the heavy, tiring jobs.

In addition, it must be recognized that there may be a low-grade infection, a hormone imbalance, underactive or overactive thyroid activity which may be responsible for excessive fatigue. Low blood pressure or low blood sugar must also be considered as possible causes of fatigue that does not readily clear up with adequate rest.

The most exhaustive studies are sometimes necessary to find the basic reasons for extraordinary fatigue.

Fatigue is a symptom. It is a body warning that you must respect its limits. Pushing yourself, despite that warning, can do you and your family an injustice.

Dear Doctor:

After I gave birth to a baby three months ago, I had a milk cyst of the breast. It's gone now, but could that spot ever become cancerous?

Mrs. E.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

The breast that once had a milk cyst (galactocele) is no greater candidate for a cancerous tumor than one that has never had it.

Dear Mr. Vichert: I am a 15-year-old girl. My boyfriend broke off with me about nine months ago. Other guys have broken off with me but I've always gotten over it. Not this time. I now have a new boyfriend who I've been going with for five months. But recently I saw my old boyfriend for the first time since he broke off with me and now he's on my mind more than ever. I don't want to think about him but I don't have any control over it.

Answer: When a relationship ends it doesn't mean that the feelings end. Naturally when you broke up with your boyfriend a lot of feelings were involved. I am sure you didn't stop liking him, but along with the positive feelings are probably feelings of anger, of being hurt, and perhaps some feelings of confusion.

Seeing your boyfriend again would naturally bring a lot of those feelings back to the surface, and they may be more difficult because over time you may have forgotten a lot of the things you didn't really like about your relationship. You are probably wishing that you could be back together again. I would advise you to accept those feelings as memory feelings — feelings that come from something that happened to you in the past. If you feel good about your present boyfriend you might want to talk to him about some of what you are feeling. You may find that you will think less about your ex-boyfriend the more you are able to share with your present boyfriend.

Dear Dr. Levine: My family moved into a new house last summer. On the first day of school, I met a girl who is also new and we became pretty good friends but then we started to argue quite a bit. This time she's gone too far, she just totally ignored me for no reason.

This fight has been going on for almost a month. Since the girls in this school have known each other for at least a year, they don't pay much attention to new students. But I'm shy and she has had better luck in making friends than I do, so I'm left alone. The guys all like me and I'm a pretty girl. Since I'm going to a different high school next year, I won't see her that often. Should I apologize anyway?

Answer: Unfortunately none of us is a mindreader, so that unless your friend tells you what it is about you that is bugging her, you'll continue to be in the dark. What I don't understand is your suggestion that you apologize to her. Apologize for what?

There are two things you can do. One is absolutely nothing. I recognize that you are finding it difficult in your new school, but all is not lost. The girls are talking to you, at least tentatively; you are pretty; boys are attracted to you — you have definite strengths and positive characteristics. Let her go — there'll be others and evn she may come back.

But if her friendship meant so much to you that her rejection of you is a perpetual sore, then you owe it to yourself to ascertain the reasons for her strange actions. And given the situation it sounds like that information will not be forthcoming unless you sit down with this girl and ask her directly. She may not answer; she may not even know. And even if she does, you may be in for a disappointment. That is, the "big bomb" that she's been carrying for so many weeks, may turn out to be an overblown balloon. If that's the case, you'll be the one who is annoyed — justifiably.

I am a firm believer in interpersonal openness and directness. We all make mistakes and it is useful to find out just what we may have done to offend a friend. But your friend, if she were mature and truly a friend, would have long ago approached you on her own. If you've done something wrong, you may desrve criticism, but not contempt.

Get it over with, and stop losing sleep. You'll find new and better friends.

Dear Dr. Powell: Can you get pregnant only during ovulation? If so, how long is the ovulation period? How can you tell when you're ovulating?

Answer: Since pregnancy requires both an egg and a sperm, fertilization occurs only at the time of ovulation. The event occurs about two weeks before the next period or approximately in the middle of a cycle 28 days in length. It is possible to determine with considerable accuracy first when ovulation occurs. The ovum or egg which is released from the ovary is drawn into the fallopian tube and travels down the tube to the uterus. The ovum will survive less than 24 hours so if it is not fertilized it disintegrates in the tube.

Sperm survives longer than the ovum. So if intercourse has occurred several days before ovulation, a pregnancy can result.

It is possible for a woman to recognize the symptoms that tell her she is ovulating. She will notice a change in the vaginal discharge a few days before ovulation.

One of the most accurate ways for a woman to determine when she is about to ovulate is to keep a chart of her daily temperatures.

These temperatures are taken in the morning before getting out of bed. There is a slight rise in this temperature following ovulation. This is known as the symptothermal method of birth control.

"Pulling out" or withdrawal or coitus interruptus is a widely used method of birth control. However, it is not considered to be a very effective method.

There may be some sperm present in the fluid which appears at the tip of the penis prior to ejaculation. Although it usually requires many million sperm in the ejaculate for just one sperm to fertilize the egg, some of the pregnancies that occur when this method is used may be because of these few sperm that are deposited in the vagina before the man withdraws his penis.

The same facts hold true for sperm deposited at the entrance of the vagina. The occasional pregnancy which results from this is due to those few sperm that are able to swim up the vagina and enter the cervix.

So it is safer to rely on other means of preventing pregnancy. The best way of selecting the best method of contraception is to contact a birth control clinic in your area.

Nail biter may require visit to a professional

By RENA PAUL

When my daughter was six years old she started to bite her nails. I thought she would outgrow the habit but now, two years later, she is still chomping away. How can I get her to stop?

C.S.

Dear C.S.:

Nail biting is a tension outlet like thumb sucking, smoking, over-eating, etc. It may be caused by a particular situation, e.g. fear of not being able to do well at school, harassment by other students, or it can be a life-long way of dealing with every-day pressures. Some children respond well to artificial finger nails. After seeing their attractive hands they begin to feel better about themselves, gain more confidence, experience less tension and drop the habit. Discuss the matter with your child's doctor or a counsellor at a child guidance clinic who may be able to help your daughter find more constructive ways of dealing with tension. But don't be upset if it takes a long time to work. Rememer that there are some very successful people in business and government who never outgrew the habit.

Dear Rena Paul:

Our little girl is retarded and, like all retarded people, she drools. When she was younger we were usually on hand to wipe her chin but now that she is 7 and running all over the house, her face is always wet and sometimes her skin looks red and sore. Do you know of a cream to prevent this kind of irritation?

G.K.

Dear G.K.:

We used to take it for granted that retarded people drool, but we were wrong. Most of them do not drool and those who do can often be helped to change their habits. A specialist at a children's hospital could determine the cause of your daughter's drooling. If there is no medical reason, contact your local Association for the Mentally Retarded and inquire about the services of a counsellor trained in behaviour modification. Most of these services are free or available for a small fee. In the meantime a thin coating of vaseline should protect the affected skin area.

Dear Rena Paul:

Most skin care preparations are designed for dry, normal or oily skin. How can I tell which one I need?

Jean M.

Dear Jean:

If you haven't detected any flaking or oiliness your skin may be normal. If it is dry, your mirror will show you a dull, dry or flaky looking surface — or your skin may feel rough, taut, uncomfortable. To test for oily skin, clean your face in the evening, rinse well, pad dry with a fresh towel and, go to bed without applying any cream or lotion. When you wake up press a tissue firmly over your face. Make sure you cover every part — don't miss even a fraction of an inch. Now examine the tissue closely. Oily marks, distributed all over the tissue, indicate oily skin. If such marks appear only in a few areas, e.g. over nose and chin, you may have "mixed" skin and should treat the oily areas with preparations for oily skin, the others with those for normal or dry skin.

the collectors

By KEN RICHARDSON

A consultant at a recent auction of some importance was constantly questioned concerning the worth of silver and gold antiques in the light of the current escalations in value. Almost invariably he urged caution. The value of an antique as a collectable can far exceed the price it might command for the metal it contains. Important to remember sterling silver is only 92.5 per cent or 925 parts of silver in 1,000 parts of metal. The word "sterling" is simply a guarantee of quality. Ten, 14 and 18 carat gold is, in turn, only 42 per cent, 58 per cent and 75 per cent pure. Consider also that gold is relatively soft and that, in nature, it is often found alloyed with other metals. Pure silver is too soft for practical use. English sterling silver plate is fully hallmarked; only miniatures might be exempted since marking would tend to obliterate fine decorative work. And the marks should be identifiable so they can be deciphered beyond doubt. London-made silver acquired a great reputation for fineness — a degree of excellence matched by the provincial guilds of Chester, York and Execter. Generally, there is as much difference between handcrafted silver and the factory mass-produced metal as between an original masterpiece and an unworthy reproduction. I hope these few thoughts will serve to restrain your hand, should you contemplate the metal mills.

Early silver pieces can yet be found at high class dealers. Auctions can produce some interesting surprises, especially in highly decorative European silver. Occasionally, some worthwhile finds appear at shows but expect to fnd prices influenced by the high-rise market.

Fortified by some knowledge of marks and the history of precious metals development, measure the value of the article by assessing all factors, with special emphasis on rarity and artistic standards. Marks on European Continental silver are somewhat harder to trace.

Boat shaped, silver plate teapot by A. Goodman & Co. of Sheffield, circa 1800 $125; Sterling Silver Rose Pattern bowl by Stieff, about $530; Sterling Silver Victorian matchbox with an English hallmark and engraved $35. Metal value escalations excepted.

Q. I have a Royal Doulton jug in Brown and Tan showing raised hunting figures. From Lambeth and 7 inches high. Value, please.

R.W.

A. No more than $60. Indications are this figure will increase.

Q. What is Delft pottery?

W.L.

A. Shortly, a tin-glazed pottery made since the 17th century. In blue or white with colored decorations.

Indian must pay tax

OTTAWA (CP) — Phyllis Boadway has lost an attempt to avoid paying 1973 taxes because she was registered as a status Indian even though she had married a non-Indian.

Under the Indian Act a woman who marries a white man loses her Indian status and the benefits that go with it, including tax-free income if earned on a reserve.

In a written decision Monday on the Boadway case, heard in Saskatoon in October, the federal tax review board dismissed her appeal against paying taxes in the 1973 taxation year, covering income earned in 1972, the year she married.

Mrs. Boadway based her appeal on the fact that even though she married, the Indian affairs department did not revoke her Indian status immediately.

She was a librarian with the Federation of Saskatchewan Indians.

The department had stopped striking such women off the status Indian lists while awaiting the outcome of a landmark case launched by Jeanette Corbier Lavell.

Mrs. Boadway retained her Indian status from her marriage on Dec. 18, 1972, until Sept. 30, 1973, when Mrs. Lavell lost her fight in the Supreme Court of Canada to let Indian women retain their status when they marry non-Indians.

Indian men who marry non-Indians retain their status and their benefits. Their white wives become status Indians and get benefits.

Mrs. Lavell and many Indian women's rights groups since her say this is sexual discrimination and the government has agreed but the law remains unchanged.

The tax review board decision written by Roland St-Onge said the fact that Mrs. Boadway's name remained on the Indian registration lists does not matter.

your horoscope

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, April 30, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stake your claim. Don't permit others to have "best" choices. Means speak up, attend to legal documents, be aware of costs and financial potential. Tinge of occult or mystery surrounds intentions of one close to you. Get full and lucid explanations!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Problem affecting partner or mate is resolved if you complete task at hand. Avoid extra costs by meeting schedule — on time. Aries, Libra persons — and the number 9 — figure prominently. Aggressive individual wants something that belongs to you. Hold tight!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New approach to special service or task brings desired results. Leo, Virgo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. One who was accustomed to having you perform basic tasks will now show appreciation. You're due for surprise — of pleasant variety!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on involvement, arriving at terms, ground rules. Protect possessions, strive to improve security. Regain sense of direction. Aquarius, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Significant change occurs as result of speculative venture. Follow through on hunch!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Shake off any tendency to play "second fiddle." Diversify, make fresh contacts, get ready for invitation to social event. Property, at inflationary price, is part of your personal scenario. Be selective, consult older family member.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Idea you submitted approximately three weeks ago comes home to roost — or bear fruit. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. What began as "moment of despair" is transformed into situation promoting hilarity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check written material. Discuss needs, desires with member of opposite sex. Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Another Libra could set pace and create atmosphere of change and challenge. Money news will be favorable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Calm approach takes precedence; be diplomatic, check legal ramifications. Important domestic adjustment takes place. Residence, personal surroundings dominate scenario. Taurus, Libra and another Scorpio dominate scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Define terms — refuse to be bullied by one who is gruff, lacks finesse, talks loud and generally represents sham. See places, people sans rainbow of deception. Pisces, Virgo natives play prominent roles. You gain valuable glimpse behind scenes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You get what you pay for ... others also express willingness to pay for your talents, products. Cancer, Leo and another Capricorn figure prominently. What had been a mild diversion is now serious business. Know it, respond accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Recognition that had been withheld, due to red tape, is granted. Special honor dominates scenario. Aries, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently. You are rid of burden. One who cares very much will prove it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You find new, dynamic ways to communicate views. eo, Aquarius natives play significant roles. Altruism, spiritual concepts, long-range plans dominate scenario. Member of opposite sex is "smitten" with you. See beyond the immediate. Perceive potential. Do not limit yourself.

IF APRIL 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensual, artistic, versatile and have tendency to scatter your efforts. You are better at perceiving project as a whole than when it comes to intricate details. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. October could be one of your most memorable months of 1980, a year in which you get your "sea legs" following a recent change of residence or domestic adjustment. Social life is more active in May. You could win a popularity contest. You are basically loyal where friends are concerned, but could be fickle in affairs of the heart. However, when you encounter "the" person, you put aside doubts and give of yourself in a complete manner.

Wedding guest bull on loose

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — An 365-kilogram Angus bull that escaped from a packing house disrupted traffic, rammed three squad cars, tore down yard fences and shrubbery, and charged persons at a wedding before it was shot by authorities.

Tuck-in service strictly G-rated

By STEPHANIE FIELD
The Washington Post

From swallowing goldfish to sitting atop flagpoles, from stuffing phone booths to streaking, U.S. college students have seized upon wacky fads to immortalize their generation.

For the class of 1980, it's tucking each other into bed.

"It's precious, really," said Dr. William Thomas, vice chancellor of student affairs at the University of Maryland where the tuck-in craze is going strong. "For a small fee, they'll read you a bedtime story, tuck you into bed and kiss you goodnight."

"It's definitely innocent," said Jennifer Little, a 21-year-old junior who was tucked in last week. "You're away from home, it makes you feel more comfortable and more secure. Besides, it's something that hasn't been done to you in a long, long time."

The current craze reportedly started at Penn State last semester, made a brief stop at Catholic Univbersity and then landed squarely on the third floor of University of Maryland's Frederick Hall where Pillow Talk, Inc., a company made up of male students, currently is filling nightly tuck-in orders for female students.

"We're strictly a class operation," said Pillow Talk member David Swerdlow. For a 99-cent fee, the students dispatch a pajama-clad bed-time reader, escorted by two Pillow Talk members in three-piece suits, to the client's dormitory room. There, the woman student is offered a choice of stories and a stuffed animal. When the story is finished, the reader tucks in his client, pecks her on the cheek and exits.

"It's unusual, yes," said Richard Stimpson, director of resident life on the College Park campus which houses 8,000 students. "I don't know whether there's been anything similar to it in recent years."

Pillow Talk, Inc. began placing ads in the campus newspaper last month and has performed over 100 tuck-ins.

"Sometimes we surprise them," said Swerdlow. It's not uncommon, he said, to find the would-be customer "with Clearasil on her face and rollers in her hair."

The slightly-built, 20-year-old freshman adjusted his wire-rimmed glasses and whispered the secret of Pillow Talk's success. "The father image, you know."

In retaliation, a female tuck-in service has sprung up at St. Mary's Hall. "When was the last time you had five girls tuck you into bed?", was how the St. Mary's students advertised their service. For a 25-cent fee, the coeds will read a bedtime story, sing "Rock-A-Bye Baby" and tuck the male client under the covers.

It's pretty funny," said 21-year-old sophomore Marie Beyernheimer.

The female tuckers place notices in the men's dormitories and never travel in groups of less than five. "For security reasons," Beyernheimer explained.

Both male and female tuckers have encountered a few unusual requests. Beyernheimer said their group could not fulfill a contract when two male clients insisted on being tucked in while nude. Pillow Talk member George Cavros recalled one female client who greeted him with candlelight and soft mucic, wearing a flimsy nightgown.

"We've had a few girls call back and ask for private tuck-ins," said Cavros, maintaining that the service is strictly G-rated.

Is the bedtime tuck-in craze a return to innocence? A statement against sex, drugs and the permissiveness of college life today?

According to Dr. Thomas, students have a "higher tolerance for gentleness" than their predecessors in the violent, anti-Vietnam war days of a decade ago.

For college administrators who suffered through the be-ins and pot parties of the '60s, the thought of pajama-clad students running from dorm to dorm at midnight, willy-nilly tucking each other into bed brings a sigh of relief.

Diefenbaker campaign broke spending laws

OTTAWA (CP) — The final election campaign of the late John Diefenbaker overshoot the legal spending limit by almost 40 per cent, an official report shows.

But any fines or court action, provided for in election expenses law, are unlikely to be taken against the former prime minister's estate or agents, a federal official said Monday.

Nor is action expected against the only other recorded breach of spending limits during the federal election of May 22, 1979 — overspending of 11 per cent on behalf of losing Progressive Conservative candidate George Kirby in the Quebec riding of Argenteuil.

The law provides for legal action on complaints of individuals or the federal election expenses commissioner, "but it is unlikely anyone would pursue cases involving a late MP or somebody who lost," the official said.

In extreme cases, a judge may bar a winning overspender from taking a Commons seat for up to seven years.

The two spending violations listed for the 1979 election — the first general election in which the limits applied — are the only ones in the records of the 1,424 candidates who contested the 282 Commons seats last year.

The information is contained in a report presented to Parliament Monday by Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel. Records from the Feb. 18 election are incomplete.

The election expenses law bases the maximum amount of money a Commons candidate may spend on his or her campaign on a formula related to the number of voters in each constituency.

Political parties also are subject to national spending limits under a similar formula.

Both individual candidates and parties are reimbursed from the federal treasury for part of their expenses and supporters may deduct part of their campaign donations from income tax.

The Hamel report suggests it pays to spend to win votes.

While the 282 winners last year spent an average of $22,900 or 83 per cent of the ceiling permitted, the average spent by all candidates was only $16,300 or 59 per cent of the limit.

The 282 runner-up spent an average of $19,700, or less than 72 per cent of the limit.

Diefenbaker, who died last August, spent $36,007 in winning his 13th election to Parliament in Prince Albert, Sask., against a legal limit of $25,850.

The former prime minister defeated New Democrat Stan Hovdebo — elected in a November byelection and again Feb. 18 — who spent $23,151 last May, or almost 90 per cent of his limit.

In Argenteuil, loser Kirby spent $28,835, compared with winning Liberal Robert Gourd's $23,183, almost 90 per cent of the limit.

Conservative Leader Joe Clark, whose party formed a minority government after the May election with 136 seats to 114 Liberals, 26 New Democrats and six Social Credit MPs, spent $24,086 or slightly less than 85 per cent of his limit in his Yellowhead, Alta, riding.

Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau spent only $19,164 or about 67 per cent of the ceiling in his Montreal riding of Mount Royal.

Ed Broadbent, NDP leader, spent $27,043 or 86 per cent of the ceiling in Oshawa, Ont.

The official record shows the two biggest political parties spent close to $4 million each while the New Democratic Party spent slightly more than $2 million. The taxpayer funded about $2 million of that.

The federal treasury pays the political parties one-half of the cost of their authorized advertising bills.

The limit on total spending by each of the three biggest political parties was $4,459,249.

The Conservatives spent $3.8 million, including more than $2.7 million on television, radio and print advertising.

The Liberals spent $3.9 million, including $2.4 million on advertising.

The NDP spent almost $2.2 million, with $1.3 million on advertising.

Other spending included travelling costs, wages, outside professional services such as polling, and administration.

In all, total election expenses by all parties is listed at slightly more than $10 million.

The taxpayers' share was $2 million, with the Conservatives getting $793,967, the Liberals $718,020, NDP $496,350, all other parties less than $8,000.

The Conservatives got more than the Liberals because they spent more on advertising.

Social Credit spent $109,402 and received $7,769 from the federal treasury.

Among the other parties, none of which won seats, the Marxist-Leninists outspent the Communist Party of Canada about eight to one, recording costs of $31,118 to $3,999 for the Communists.

The Libertarians listed spending of $13,329, the separatist Union Populaire party of Quebec nothing at all.

The Rhinoceros Party spent $8,634.

Among them, the also-ran parties shared just $143 from the federal treasury.

DANCING IN THE DAWN is the way Tse Kue Shao and her husband Chun Miao greet the day in Chatham, Ont. Elderly couple are recent immigrants to Canada and say they intend to keep up the ritual exercise which they perform on the sidewalk shortly after dawn each day.

Feds await B.C. word on Kemano

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister John Roberts told the Commons Monday he would await the results of a provincial public hearing into the construction of the Kemano II hydro-electric power plant in British Columbia before speaking up on the matter.

Bob McClelland, B.C. environment minister, has said the project would not begin until a full public inquiry has been held because of the possible environmental problems involved.

Construction of the $800 million plant would involve water diversvon to the Tahtsa Lake and a 30-metre high rock dam at Nanika River below another lake.

Tougher rights laws sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Human Rights Commission says Parliament should outlaw discrimination based on sexual orientation, political belief, mental handicap, retardation and drug or alcohol addiction.

The commission, in its 1979 annual report tabled Monday in the Commons by Justice Minister Jean Chretien, also asks for some stronger legal authority enabling it to more effectively enforce some of the powers it now has over government and business under federal jurisdiction.

For example, a commission tribunal ordered the Toronto-based Western Guard Party to stop issuing recorded hate messages by telephone. The organization simply changed the recordings slightly to get around the law. The commission wants the power to issue more effective orders.

The commission spent more than $3.8 million in 1979. It handled 458 complaints of discrimination after screening thousands of inquiries ranging from misdirected complaints to requests for literature.

The commission also recommends that a review of all classified government jobs be undertaken and that the government "eliminate the requirement for a security clearance in all positions which do not actually involve the safety or security of Canada or her allies."

Anyone denied a job for security reasons should have the right to a hearing, the commission adds.

Grits eye special tax on crude

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal government is considering a special tax on all crude oil used in Canada to compensate for the soaring cost of its subsidy on imported oil used in the eastern part of the country.

The newspaper says that the proposal is expected to be part of the oil-pricing package that Energy Minister Marc Lalonde will discuss with his provincial counterparts in early May.

The story says the new tax would be collected from oil companies, but they would pass it directly on to the consumer in the form of higher prices for gasoline, home heating fuel and other products.

Finders of Tory bugs admit planting them

OTTAWA (CP) — William Sandiford and Daniel McGarry, partners in an electronics security firm, pleaded guilty in county court Monday to public mischief in connection with the bugging of Progressive Conservative party offices on Parliament Hill in 1977.

McGarry also pleaded guilty to attempting to defraud the Conservative party. A charge of fraud against Sandiford was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Charges of possession of illegal electronic listening devices against both men were also dismissed.

McGarry and Sandiford were charged after they found an electronic bugging device in an armchair in the office of Conservative MP Elmer MacKay and another suspicious object in a telephone in the office of Joe Clark, then Opposition leader.

MacKay stunned the Commons Oct. 31 when he announced the listening device had been found in his office. Later the same day a device was found in Clark's office and MacKay speculated that the RCMP security service had been responsible for the buggings.

Testimony Monday showed Sandiford and McGarry were alone when they discovered the devices; it was impossible to detect the bug in MacKay's office in the way Sandiford and McGarry said they did, and the device in Clark's office did not work when it was discovered, as they claimed.

Their firm, Uniserv Sound and Signal Inc. of Toronto, billed the Conservative party $13,616.95 for services rendered, but reduced the bill to $3,184.80 after the party disputed some of the charges.

S-Sgt. Dan McFaul, an Ottawa police officer who conducted a two-year investigation of the case, told the court McGarry and Sandiford swept MacKay's office at MacKay's request.

Mackay was attending daily question period in the Commons when they arrived to do the search but his secretary, Josephine Cleall, permitted them to enter MacKay's private office. Sandiford and McGarry were in the office alone with the door closed for about 10 minutes, he said.

They then called in Mrs. Cleall and showed her an armchair with a one-inch slit under the seat. She watched as they enlarged the slit with a pair of scissors and removed the device.

The almost new battery in the device was found later to have been used for no more than six hours, McFaul said.

And, although Sandiford told police he detected the device with a spectrum monitor from a distance of six feet, police were not able to do so later during tests.

Later in the day, Sandiford and McGarry searched Clark's office. They found a "top hat diode" connected to the telephone receiver in Clark's office, again while alone in the room, McFaul testified.

Photographs were taken of the "top hat diode" the night it was discovered. Those photographs show the telephone had normal wiring at that time and was not capable of picking up conversations in the board room, McFaul said.

BREW FOR THE CREW is mighty important to the men of HMNZS Otago, a New Zealand ship in Vancouver prior to Pacific naval exercises. While Otago may run on costly diesel fuel, its sailors need a different kind of liquid gold to keep them going and they'd hate to see any of it go missing. To that end, Able Seaman Hopgood was posted to keep an eye on the navy's suds.

18 injured in gas blast

EDMONTON (CP) — A natural gas leak caused an explosion in downtown Edmonton Monday which sent 18 persons to hospital.

Bill Bissett, department public relations officer, said six persons, including five Edmonton firefighters, are in satisfactory condition. He said the explosion injured more firemen than have been hurt in a single incident in the city in the last 30 years.

Bissett said the gas leak was caused by three plumbers working in the basement of the building. They were tapping into a main gas line but "they blew it," he said, When the job was complete, they found they could not shut off the flow.

Bissett said a spark from a drill they were using caused a small initial explosion, injuring the plumbers slightly. In the subsequent commotion, they knocked off a sprinkler head which alerted firefighters.

Bissett said the firefighters arrived at the three-storey, brick building at 11:25 a.m. The second, larger explosion occurred just after they entered the basement.

This one came after natural gas filled the boiler room and was ignited by a pilot light in the boiler.

"It sounded like an earthquake," said Bill Boston of Boston and Associates, one of the tenants on the third floor of the building.

It was initially believed the plumbers were trapped in the explosion and firemen searched the debris for two hours before concluding they had escaped.

It was later discovered the three had gone to hospital for treatment. They were later released.

Hunt can cash oil for debts

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (UPC) — Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt can go ahead with plans to turn over a substantial share of Beaufort Sea oil and gas leases to pay a large silver futures debt, a N.W.T. Supreme Court judge ruled Monday.

Judge Calvin Tallis ruled Hunt could proceed with a deal with Engelhard Minerals and Chemicals Corp. of New York. The deal which involves transfer of a 20-percent interest, estimated at $300 million, in Hunt's Beaufort holdings has a completion date of April 30, 1980.

The ruling Monday varied an order issued by the court April 1, which effectively froze any transfers of the ownership of Hunt's Beaufort Sea leases. BP had obtained an injunction against the move in order to collect $40 million in damages from Hunt awarded by a British court.

Hunt lawyers Sunday filed affadavit evidence on the value of Hunt's holdings after the transfers are completed. The Texas billionaire has undertaken to retain leases worth enough to meet the terms of the 1979 $40 million judgment awarded BP by a British court.

Second CLC chief resigns over QFL

TORONTO (CP) — Another vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress has resigned in protest against the congress's failure to take action against a violation of its constitution by the Quebec Federation of Labor.

Raymond Gall of Edmonton, Canadian vice-president of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association, said he supports congress president Dennis McDermott on every issue except his failure to crack down on the Quebec federation for giving a haven to unions that have bolted their international labor bodies.

Ken Rose of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers — the only other direct representative of the building trades unions on the congress executive — quit four weeks ago. Both men will boycott the congress convention in Winnipeg next month.

Gall said he recognizes the Quebec situation is a thorny one for McDermott on the eve of the convention and hopes to work out a solution later.

Quebec poll split

MONTREAL (CP) — The latest public opinion poll on the Quebec referendum says pretty much the same as two previous ones — that the yes and no forces are running neck and neck as the May 20 vote nears.

The Gallup poll indicates 38 per cent of 828 Quebecers questioned two weeks ago would vote for giving their provincial government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association, while 36 per cent were against.

Another 19 per cent were undecided, and seven per cent refused to say how they felt.

Forest fire rages from Alberta into Sask.

EDMONTON (CP) — A forest fire raging out of control in northeastern Alberta had burned about 180,000 acres by Monday, making it one of the largest in recent provincial history.

Jim Skrenek, head of fire control operations for the Alberta Forest Service, said Monday the fire, which started five days ago 190 kilometres north of Fort McMurray, moved into northwestern Saskatchewan on the weekend and covers about 10,000 acres in that province.

He said the largest blaze in Alberta to date covered 235,000 acres south of Slave Lake in 1968.

Skrenek said the latest fire, apparently started by a dry lightning strike, is costing at least $30,000 a day to fight.

The forest service has about 200 men and six helicopters in the area, most involved in maintaining a 32-kilometre fire line along the southeast perimeter.

The fire grew by only 9,000 acres Sunday, down from Saturday's 50,000-acre increase. Skrenek said the decline probably resulted from decreased winds and a move into different types of timber.

There is no estimate available on damage caused by the fire.

"How do you put a dollar value on lost recreation potential and watershed?" Skrenek asked.

There were 71 fires burning in the province Monday, nine of them out of control.

So far this year, said Skrenek, about 270 forest fires have been reported, covering 200,000 acres. To this time last year, 17 fires had been sited covering eight acres.

Ed Stashko, chief meteorologist for the forest service, offered little encouragement that the situation would improve.

He said Monday the province faces the hottest, driest spring and summer it has experienced in the past century.

Stashko said record high temperatures, low humidity and high winds are forecast to continue and will result in critical situations for Alberta's forestry and agriculture industries.

Skrenek said the forest service now has about 800 men on firelines throughout Alberta and another 300 on stand-by. There are also 40 or 50 helicopters and 10 air tankers (water bombers and fire retardant carriers) available.

Although there are about 4,000 trained firefighters in Alberta, most of them natives, no more than about 1,400 should be working at any one time, he said.

A pilot killed Tuesday while water-bombing a fire in Slave Lake has been identified as Taras Kitzul, 54, of Edmonton.

In Saskatchewan, there were between 35 and 40 forest fires burning Monday, said Red Taylor, director of forest fire protection in that province.

Taylor said the Alberta blaze does not appear to be advancing toward Cluff Lake, which had been threatened, alleviating immediate fears of evacuation.

Opening lead — eight of diamonds.

In the play of many hands, everything fits into place as neatly as in a jigsaw puzzle. Declarer's chief job is to analyze which pieces are missing and where they are located. Consider this deal where South is in four spades and West leads a diamond. East cashes the A-K and returns the five, whereupon West ruffs and returns a club.

South is off to a bad start and needs the rest of the tricks. All his cards are sure winners except for a heart, and he knows that he can make the contract if he takes a heart finesse in the right direction. At the same time, he has no sure clue to the location of the queen.

Declarer has a fairly common problem to solve and the recommended procedure is to inaugurate a series of plays to ferret out the desired information. South does this in the present case by winning the club return with the king and drawing four rounds of trumps, discarding a heart from dummy.

He learns a great deal about East's hand as he takes these steps. He discovers that East started with four spades, in addition to five diamonds, and all that remains to be done is to learn how many clubs East started with.

Accordingly, South plays a club to the ace and ruffs a club as East follows suit each time. The picture of East's hand is now virtually complete, since 12 of his 13 cards are fully accounted for. At most, East can have one heart.

So South cashes the ace of hearts, East following suit, leads another heart, and finesses the jack with 100 percent assurance that it will win.

Abuses of rights in U.S.S.R. bared

Times News Services

Only months before the Olympic flame is carried into Moscow, Amnesty International — the acclaimed defender of human rights — has released a report outlining the way political prisoners are handled in the Soviet Union.

A statement said the 217-page document was made public Monday to provide useful background information on human rights in the Soviet Union at a time when international attention will be focused on it and many aspects of its society. A similar report was released in 1978 when Argentina hosted the World Cup soccer tournament.

However, the statement also indicated the London-based organization will not lend its voice to support the United States-led boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympic Games which begin in late July.

As "a matter of policy," the organization does not propose or support boycotts of any kind, the statement said.

The report, Prisoners of Conscience in the U.S.S.R.: Their Treatment and Conditions, expands upon a 1975 study which suggested there were at least 10,000 political prisoners hidden in labor camps, prisons and psychiatric institutions.

The organization — winner of the Nobel Peace Prize — says since then at least 400 more persons have been arrested, tried and sentenced for their beliefs, frequently under criminal legislation which explicitly restricts human rights.

But fresh arrests and trials as the report went to print ensure "the real number of prisoners of conscience to be much larger than the known number," it said.

The statement said Amnesty International has not received "any allegations from the U.S.S.R. of the sort of torture often encountered in some other countries, such as physical mutilation."

But the report describes cases of ill-treatment, including beatings, chronic hunger and the administration of powerful drugs to the political inmates of psychiatric hospitals.

It also explains the many loopholes within the Soviet Union's 1977 constitution which allow police to arrest or intimidate persons whose views do not coincide with those of the government.

Quotations from Soviet publications which explain the official definition of human rights, freedom of speech and religion are included in the report.

Ten of the Soviet Union's prisoners of conscience have been adopted by Amnesty International chapters in Canada. The sponsoring chapters write letters to the Soviet government, hold demonstrations and otherwise press for the release of their adoptees.

A. V. Ivanytsky has been adopted by Amnesty's Victoria chapter and Pavilas Pechiulionis by the Vancouver chapter.

Amnesty International maintains an office in Moscow. But that chapter, like all others, may not concentrate on political prisoners in its home country.

Thief a prisoner of conscience

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — For almost four years, Margaret Veca and her boyfriend lived the lives of frightened fugitives, rarely venturing out of their hideaway apartment on the New Jersey shore.

Miss Veca — pregnant and unmarried — had embezzled $95,614 from the Hoboken, N.J. bank where she worked as a clerk and she and her boyfriend decided to run away.

Apparently unable to bear the pressure any longer, they turned themselves in and gave back the $52,630 that remained.

On Monday, U.S. District Court Judge James Coolahan decided Miss Veca's self-imposed exile was punishment enough and suspended her three-year jail term and placed her on probation.

"This is one of those cases that tugs at the heartstrings," Assistant U.S. Attorney John Antonas commented later. "She's probably suffered more punishment than most felons."

She pleaded guilty to federal embezzlement charges March 19 and admitted she took the money from the vault of the Washington Savings Bank in Hoboken on May 28, 1976 — the eve of the Memorial Day weekend.

She her boyfriend, a former chemical worker from Jersey City, who apparently was unaware of the embezzlement plot beforehand, ran away together and lived a paranoid, hermit-like life, rarely leaving their apartment.

But then on Feb. 26, the couple and their 3½-year-old son walked into a U.S. magistrate's office in Newark and turned over a laundry bag with $52,630 of the remaining cash.

The embezzlement "was an implusive act, motivated by shame and conceived in irrationality," federal public defender John McMahon told the judge in pleading for a non-custodial sentence.

Describing the case as "most unusual," McMahon said compelling personal reasons prompted Miss Veca to steal the money and flee. He said she "placed herself in custody and lived virtually in prison" during the years she eluded the FBI.

The public defender said Miss Veca, who has lived with her parents in Holmdel since surrendering, recognized her mistakes and will probably never stand before another judge.

"I fully recognize the situation that existed at the time. While I can't condone it, I fully understand it," Coolahan said in imposing the sentence.

The prosecutor said it was probably Miss Veca's strict middle class upbringing and fear of her family's non-acceptance of her unwed pregnancy that made her take the money and flee.

Hundreds arrested in anti-nuke protest

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Police made more than 300 arrests Monday as anti-nuclear demonstrators tried to block entrances to the U.S. defence department and burned the flags of countries that have atomic weapons.

About 1,000 marchers staged a three-kilometre "funeral" procession from the U.S. energy department to the Pentagon, asking employees at both sites to stop the production of nuclear arms and atomic power.

Many of the demonstrators shouted slogans against last week's attempt to rescue U.S. hostages in Iran. They said the raid into Iranian territory has pushed the world to the brink of nuclear war.

Most of the 300 arrested were charged with disorderly conduct, defacing government property, or trespassing.

Demonstrators burned flags of the U.S., Britain, China, the Soviet Union, France and India — countries known to possess nuclear weapons.

Veteran anti-war activist Daniel Ellsberg, who released the so-called Pentagon Papers about U.S. involvement in Vietnam, told the crowd the failure of the Iran rescue mission is a blessing because if it had been accomplished, "We could be at war and the whole world would be at risk."

Pediatrician and long-time political activist Dr. Benjamin Spock said: "I am violently against nuclear arms and power . . . If we do not get rid of nuclear weapons, they will get rid of us."

Spock had vowed he would be arrested Monday, as he had been several times in anti-war and anti-draft movements, but a police spokesman said neither Spock nor Ellsberg was among those arrested.

The rally was the climax of four days of anti-nuclear activities in the United States and in Europe.

VICE-PRESIDENT WALTER CRONKITE? Cronkite, 63, due to retire soon as CBS television anchorman and managing editor of the network's evening news program, has denied a U.S. magazine report he is interested in running with Independent John Anderson, left, in the 1980 presidential race. "The New Republic reporter has misinterpreted our conversation," Cronkite said today. " I have never endorsed a political candidate."

Student protests in S. Africa worsening

JOHANNESBURG, (UPI) — Police armed with batons fought running clashes with protesting mulatto students in a Johannesburg suburb today and detained hundreds of the demonstrators observing a school boycott.

The police action in the Newlands township came as Prime Minister P. W. Botha met with his cabinet to discuss ways of ending a nationwide school boycott by mulatto students protesting racial discrimination.

Teachers said the police charged into the school grounds with swinging batons and chased the students into private homes before carting off at least 15 truckloads to jail.

Police said they acted after the estimated 1,000 youths from four high schools began chanting and throwing stones.

The incident was the worst yet reported in an eight-day-old school boycott by mulatto students that some opposition figures have said could spark serious riots.

A police spokesman said 12 predominantly black student leaders have been detained in police raids, but that more that 30 others arrested have been released pending court appearances.

Milan inmates shoot way out

MILAN (Reuter) — Sixteen prisoners, including urban guerrilla leader Corrado Alunni, shot their way out of one of Italy's top security jails Monday.

Nine were quickly recaptured but seven remained at large.

Police said five of the prisoners, including Alunni, were critically wounded in the shootout with security guards outside Milan's San Vittore jail. Two guards were also injured.

Police said the group made the escape attempt after lunch while exercising in the courtyard of the jail's top security wing. Armed with pistols, they overpowered and disarmed several guards and marched them to the main prison gate.

Once out, they fled in different directions. But police said several were immediately caught by security guards patrolling the prison complex.

Camera-angered surgeon cuts rays from Dixy's eyes

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — A Richland surgeon put his knife to a novel use during a speech by Governor Dixy Lee Ray to the local chamber of commerce Monday night by cutting the light cords to two local television cameras.

Dr. Robert Luckey reportedly severed the cords after he became concerned that the camera lights were hurting the governor's eyes, said police Sgt. R. L. Lyness. No charges were filed, but a report will be reviewed by the city attorney, Lyness said.

KEPR-TV reporter Ed Evans said the doctor approached him during the speech and complained that the lights were hurting Ray's eyes. Evans said while he was explaining he was using as little light as possible, Luckey pulled out a knife and cut the power cord.

Ray apologized for the incident following her speech.

Luckey confirmed he had cut the cords.

"I have a lot of respect for our governor, and she was an honored guest," he said. "I don't have anything against the press."

First Penn rescued

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Federal financial regulators Monday announced a $500 million rescue of First Pennsylvania Bank of Philadelphia, the third largest bailout in U.S. banking history.

In addition, other banks have agreed to furnish First Pennsylvania with a $1 billion line of credit to help keep the bank afloat.

First Pennsylvania is the largest bank in Philadelphia and the 23rd largest in the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) chairman Irvine H. Sprague said the bailout was essential to "providing general confidence in the banking system of our country." Sprague called First Pennsylvania an isolated incident.

The federal rescue plan is unique in that it is dependent upon assistance from the private sector. The $500 million aid package consists of a $325 million five-year loan from the FDIC plus $175 million in five-year loans from 22 major U.S. banks.

Two escapers caught

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police have recaptured two more of the prisoners who staged the biggest jail break in San Francisco history, but eight are still free.

Three prisoners were caught shortly after they broke out of the seventh-floor jail on Sunday and two others — Mark Fennimore and Donald Walker — were caught on Monday without resistance in a hotel.

A taxi stolen by two of the prisoners is missing, a police spokesman said.

"We know they're armed, and we assume they're trying to get out of the Bay area."

Natalie now knows road to happiness

By JUDY KLEMESRUD
New York Times

NEW YORK — Natalie Wood bit into a cheese omelet here the other day and recalled that after reading the script for her latest movie, The Last Married Couple in America, she thought to herself, "This is all about R.J. and me."

R.J. is her husband, the actor Robert Wagner, whom she first married in 1957, divorced in 1962, and remarried in 1972. During their 10 years apart, both married others and each had a daughter. Even in jaded Hollywood, where changing partners causes no more attention than a gray Mercedes on Rodeo Drive, the Wagners' second marriage was big news.

And they have lived happily ever since, Miss Wood said, even though they are subjected to many of the same pressures as the happily married couple she and George Segal play in The Last Married Couple in America, which is billed as "an adult romantic comedy."

"When you're married these days, you sometimes feel like you're in the wilderness," the 41-year-old actress said over lunch in her suite in the Pierre Hotel. "You know, you feel you're the pioneers and the Indians are all around, shooting you down one by one. Even when R.J. and I want to go out to dinner together, people say to us, 'That's weird. What do you talk about?' "

In their new film, Miss Wood and Segal play an affluent Southern California couple who play touch football every Sunday with three other supposedly happy couples. Eventually, the other couples break up one by one until Miss Wood and Segal are left playing football by themselves.

The couple finally split after encountering many of the things that are said to be threatening marriage today: peer pressure from divorced friends, wife-swapping, infidelity, predatory single women, venereal disease and the attraction of middle-aged persons to younger men and women. But, like Miss Wood's real-life marriage, there is a happy ending.

"I guess what the film is saying," Miss Wood said, "is that nobody has come up with anything better than marriage."

Miss Wood said she thought one of the reasons so many marriages are breaking up today is that people tend to walk away from a relationship at the first sign of trouble.

"There is no longer a stigma attached to being divorced," she said. "So a lot of people just walk away from the relationship rather than trying to make it work. Really, that's not very healthy."

The story of how the Wagners got back together sounds like the stuff of a Hollywood screenplay, or a romantic novel.

Miss Wood smiled when she recalled how she and Wagner had run into each other at a party in 1970, after not seeing each other for eight years. Both were married to others at the time, and she was six months pregnant. "The next day he sent me roses and a little note," she said. "I sat and cried for a while, and thought that was that. About a year later, when I was getting a divorce and R.J. had gotten a divorce, he called me. He kept calling and calling. So we spent some time together, and then we took a trip on the Queen Elizabeth. I told him how I had kept everything — my wedding ring, the top of our wedding cake and other mementos — and he said he had, too.

"I guess we finally realized that our other relationships hadn't even come close to what we had before — and we thought we had had problems!"

Why does she think her second marriage to Wagner, who stars in the current ABC television series Hart to Hart, has worked out much better than her first marriage to him? "In general, we're much more open with one another," she said. "If we have any negative thoughts, we don't harbor them, we talk."

Private Hollywood clubs bar riffraff

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin are Hollywood's biggest tippers, says Joe Scott, a private club operator who has seen both stars hand out $100 bills for tabs that didn't come to half that amount.

Scott currently owns and operates the Club Barrington, a private restaurant, disco and hangout for 1,200 movieland elite.

Memberships cost $1,500. Monthly dues are $30 monthly. While the costs are not exorbitant by Hollywood standards, they do tend to keep out the riffraff.

Private bar and restaurant joints have flourished and faded in Hollywood since the Daisy was opened in Beverly hills a couple of decades ago by Jack Hansen, of Jax slacks fame.

Private clubs are not so much a manifestation of snobbery as a palliative against public scrutiny for movie stars, TV personalities and other celebrities.

Limited membership clubs provide the famous and notorious an opportunity to let down their hair among their peers, disco dance, play cards or whatever in relative obscurity.

They also insure a dinner uninterrupted by tourists seeking autographs or drunks looking to punch a leading man in the teeth.

Twenty years ago Scott was general manager of PJ's in Hollywood, a public watering hole that became a prototype for the private clubs that followed. It was a hangout for stars, agents, producers and paparazzi.

"There were problems at PJ's that could never be resolved," Scott recalled.

"We had fights in the club every night, usually between two guys over a girl. They seldom involved big names but stars began avoiding the place because they didn't want to get mixed up in those things."

The stars deserted PJ's for the Daisy, then the Candy Store and the Factory.

"None of them lasted more than two years," Scott said. "Either they weren't well-managed or the food or service didn't hold up."

Joe left PJ's and went on to open the Whiskey A-Go-Go and more recently helped get Pips started, the most successful and oldest private club of its kind.

"Hugh Hefner was one of the founders of Pips," Scott said. "He used to come to afternoon board meetings at his mansion in his bathrobe and pajamas. I left Pips a year ago to start the Club Barrington.

"Among our members are Dean Martin, Peter Falk, Jaclyn Smith, Milton Berle, James Caan, Jim Garner, Buddy Hackett, Kaye Stevens, Connie Stevens and Jack Jones. Some nights one or two of the celebrities will get up and entertain."

In catering to the care and feeding of stars, Scott presides over two dining rooms, a disco and a screening room for stars or producers to run their latest movies.

Over the years he has come to know celebrity preferences for foo- and drink and fun and games. He also is acquainted with their quirks.

"It's a toss-up whether Frank or Dean is the biggest tipper," Scott said.

"A couple of weeks ago Dean sent a party of six guests in for dinner and told me give him the check. Somebody goofed and one of the guests grabbed the check. Dean came in the next day and gave the help $300 in tips just in case.

"Frank once came to me with $100 to give to the bartender because he'd forgotten to tip him the previous day — for one drink. Many a time Frank goes into the kitchen to give tips to the chef or the busboys.

"Frank and Dean have more in common than being Italian and big tippers. They can also hold their booze better than most people. Frank is one of the best drinkers I ever saw.

"When Frank comes into a club, we put bottles of vodka, scotch and buorbon on the table. There isn't enough time to reorder drinks for his pals. Yet I've nemer seen him or his friends drunk.

"Some of the members of my club — like Don Adams and Milton Berle — don't drink at all. And most of the people who do drink, especially women, are really into white wine more than booze."

Future Cop writers win copyright suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury has awarded science fiction writer Harlan Ellison and writer-editor Ben Bova $337,000 in damages in a copyright infringement case touched off by the ABC-Paramount television series Future Cop.

The jury ruled that the series, about a robot in human form who worked as a policeman, did not infringe on the statutory copyright of the authors' 1970 short story, Brillo. But the jury said the series did violate the common law copyright of a screenplay proposal Ellison and Bova said they submitted to ABC.

"It is a message to writers that if they care about their work and stand up to these people and fight, they can at last bring an end to the practice of stealing ideas that is so rampant in the industry," Ellison said after the verdict Friday.

The bean that isn't a bean

Whether the broad bean is appreciated as a table delicacy or not, the plant itself is rather unusual in the realm of garden vegetables.

Although called a bean it is not a bean at all, nor is it a member of the bean family.

It is one of the few species of vetch which have no tendrils.

Botanically it is Vicia faba (vis'-e-a or vi'-see-a), vicia meaning 'to cling', alluding to the clinging tendrils of most vetch plants, and 'faba' being the original catalog name, the faba or fava bean.

Unlike our other beans, this plant is native to N. America and southwestern Asia, the perfume from a commercial acre of broad beans in flower being likened to something long remembered.

In some parts of the world broad beans are known as Horse Beans, being grown solely as forage crops. Other parts know them as an excellent species of vetch to grow for a green manure crop for turning under to improve the soil - undoubtedly sold in bulk at a low price.

There are long podded varieties with either white or green beans, broad podded Windsors with white or green seeds, and small podded varieties in both dwarf and tall forms.

Windsor Long-pods are considered the finer flavored, and the green seeded forms are held to be more tender and palatable than the white.

A good garden soil suits them well, not too rich or they will tend to make large plants with few pods, a common complaint of local gardeners.

They can be sown in a double row with 25 cms between rows, the seed 10 cms deep and 25 cms apart.

Sowings may be made from November in sheltered gardens), until late April or early May, mid-January to mid-February being suitable under the Chase glass cloches, in cold frames, or with temporary protection in the open garden always in a winter sunny spot for an early crop. These later sowings are now in flower.

After the first four flowers have formed at the base of the plants, the tender growing tips are cut off, or when the first four pods have formed. This deters the black fly and encourages pod formation.

If a few black fly are now seen on the succulent tips, squeeze then between thumb and finger to prevent spreading, then cut off the tips back to firmer tissues.

The host plant for the black fly over winter is the Canada thistle frequently seen in it young stages in local gardens as the bean flowers appear. As the tissues stiffen the flies move to the more juicy and soft broad beans which are easier to penetrate with their sucking devices.

An infestation of black flies, if allowed to develop will lessen pod production by weakening the plants due to the loss of plant nutrients to the flies.

Should an infestation of flies develop before being noticed (the first flies lay several hundred eggs each day) wash the plants with a weak solution of soap and water daily for about four days to kill most of the flies, and about every four to five days afterwards for the next two weeks.

The pretty scalloped edges seen on bean plants leaves is the work of the bean weevil or pea weevil. These can be controlled by dusting the plants with agricultural lime in powder form (dusting lime) early in the morning while the plants are still damp with dew to help hold the powder on the foliage.

The weevils are chewing insects, not sucking insects, and are quickly dehydrated when the powdered lime gets inside them.

The main thing now is to check for the sucking black flies early each morning and treat then as outlined above.

Trip agent watchdog appointed

VANCOUVER (CP) — William Rourke, former passenger sales manager for Air Canada, is B.C.'s new registrar of travel agents, a role in which he monitors the travel industry to ensure that holidaymakers get what they pay for.

Appointed to replace former registrar Alec Burden who resigned last month, Rourke is authorized under the Travel Agents Registration Act to inspect the financial records of any travel agent in B.C.

The registrar's office, an arm of the Ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, administers the fund used to compensate travellers who prepay holiday costs and then run into difficulties with the agency involved.

Under the act, all travel agencies in B.C. are required to register and to contribute to the provincial travel insurance fund.

Capt. Manktelow with Korean grenade

'The man the Chinese couldn't kill'

By BRUCE LEVETT

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — "It was a big, wonderful adventure for us.

"We caroused and did all the things you're supposed to do in the better war stories — all the wonderfully stupid things that young men dream of doing."

Capt. Gordon Manktelow was packing to leave the Canadian army after 29 years in uniform and reminiscing about one long, incredible night when L. Cpl. Gordon Manktelow became "the man the Chinese couldn't kill."

He's leaving the big armed forces base at Borden, Ont., to take over an automotive supply franchise in the Vancouver-New Westminster area.

The Korean police action, the war that never was and never officially ended, erupted 30 years ago on June 25 and the dark-haired 18-year-old from Ajax, Ont., joined early.

"The wish of all young men when I joined was to be a paratrooper," the grey-haired captain recalled.

"My chum and I joined the 1st Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment — the airborne." He never did jump, however, but was sent to the 2nd Battalion in Korea as a section leader fresh from infantry school.

He can't recall the date but it was a cold, spring night in 1951 when he and five others were stationed in front of the platoon.

"We were an outpost. The Chinese were trying to wipe us out on the way through to their major objective, the platoon area.

"It was getting dark and I could hear the Chinese moving down in front of us and behind us."

He told Cpl. James Gilmore of Brookline, Que., the senior non-commissioned officer present, who radioed back the information.

"Permission was given to withdraw."

By then, "the mortars were coming in." Cpl. Gilmore and Pte. J. H. Williams of Verona, Ont., were killed.

Went back for rifle

In the confusion of retreat, they forgot a new weapon lent to the platoon by the United States forces — a special rifle fitted with an infra-red telescopic sight powered by a battery pack.

"I went back," the captain said. "I was absolutely terrified."

He took two of the old No. 36-type grenades and screwed them together and pulled the pin. The weapon was blasted apart as he ran for cover.

He could hear the Chinese closer now, and lay down in a copse off the trail.

A group of enemy soldiers ran through and "one of them literally tripped over me."

They slammed him across the knuckles to make him drop his rifle and "sometime during the process, I was searched — they took cigarettes, candy bars, some ammunition, my grenades. . . ."

A bayonet went through the flesh under his right shoulder. He took other, superficial thrusts in the back. They beat him with rifles.

"Then, as they were walking away, they pulled the pin on one of the grenades" and left it beside him. The blast lifted him from the ground and the butt plate, a 2.5-centimetre chunk of metal, was driven into his left thigh.

"There was no pain, just a great deal of shock. They came back for another look. I was lying on my back."

The Chinese patrol machine-gunned him — "one burst laced up my parka; I could feel the heat."

Another burst blew his cap off, but Manktelow was not hit.

Strangler was called off

After the Chinese left, one enemy soldier crawled back and put his hands around the Canadian's throat. His comrades called him off.

His fear had gone and there was no pain.

Sometime during that night, "our own support artillery came in on our position.

"I was getting buffetted around."

Manktelow began to crawl and the noise of the barrage ceased.

"I was on the path, but I couldn't keep going. I realized that if anyone saw me, on either side, I was going to get shot."

He decided to wait for dawn and because "I didn't want the Chinese to find me again," he groped his way into a mine field.

The next thing he knew, it was getting light and he could hear voices, but he couldn't make out the language. The severely-wounded soldier had one weapon left, a last grenade the Chinese had missed, and he pulled the pin.

Then he saw the silhouette of a Canadian cap and a sten gun. The soldier yelled "who is it," and — he still doesn't know why — Manktelow yelled back "for Christ's sake, it isn't Jack Benny."

The patrol carried him to the platoon area before they could pry loose the live grenade and gently press home another pin.

There was one more twist to the Manktelow story.

A Canadian reporter got the story from headquarters and sent it around the world. Essentially, he made only one mistake.

Instead of L. Cpl. Gordon Manktelow of Ajax, Ont., the central figure was identified as Cpl. Kenneth V. McCormond of Sudbury, Ont., wounded in a different action.

Manktelow's mother saw the story in a Canadian newspaper, clipped it and enclosed it in a letter to her son.

"As I recall," he says, "she wrote 'what a terrible ordeal — thank God it didn't happen to you'."

The reporter, who had moved to another area, heard of the mistake and travelled 1,500 kilometres to find the teenaged rifleman and rectify the error.

Canadian Pacific sued over Massawippi line

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian Pacific Ltd. of Montreal is facing another multi-million-dollar suit over the sale of land alleged to have belonged to subsidiary railway companies.

In a $25-million suit filed Monday in Quebec Superior Court, Toronto businessman Joseph Pope alleges that Canadian Pacific broke terms of a 999-year lease giving it exclusive operating rights over the Massawippi Valley Railway, a short line railway which runs from Sherbrooke, Que., through North Hatley, Que. to the Vermont border.

The lease was signed more than a century ago — on Dec. 27, 1871. But since that time Canadian Pacific, which now owns about 93 per cent of common shares of the Massawippi Valley Railway Co., has sold certain pieces of land belonging to that company and has pocketed the money itself, Pope alleges.

Mentioning as examples two pieces of land, sold in 1959 and 1968 respectively for a total of $43,500, the suit alleges that lands under lease to CP "have been sold at the instigation of CP and the proceeds of such sales have been converted to the benefit of CP, thus wrongfully depriving Massawippi of the said proceeds."

Pope says he is acting on behalf of himself and other minority shareholders. Besides Canadian Pacific, his suit names Massawippi directors and officers, CP president F. S. Burbidge, and the CP chairman and chief executive officer, Ian D. Sinclair.

Pollution poses puzzle

Ladysmith Harbor is polluted to the extent that it's detrimental to shellfish and the Cowichan Valley Region Board wants to know why.

The board decided to write the provincial government asking that a water quality study be undertaken in the harbor to discover the source of the pollution.

Ten years ago the community began a clean-up of the harbor and has since formed the Ladysmith Harbor Advisory Committee.

The committee has determined that the harbor is polluted but hasn't been able to find out why.

It asked for a water study but the provincial government said there were no funds.

"They suggested that we do away with the harbormaster's position. This would give us enough money to conduct the study," said Mayor Frank Jameson.

But, he said, the committee is opposed to this because the harbormaster has done a good job.

In other matters the board discussed a location and funding for the proposed Cowichan Valley Museum.

The site proposed is the Activity Centre building on Ingram Street but the board was unable to agree about who would operate and pay for the museum.

Separatism out: Bennett

B.C. is the only part of Canada that could be self-sustaining as a separate country, Premier Bill Bennett said today.

But he warned there are no answers in separatism.

He also told students as Spectrum High School not to be deluded by those who say B.C. should join the U.S.

While the province has problems within Canada, these would only become worse if B.C. became part of the U.S.

"If that were to take place, B.C. would change from a wealthy province to a poor state," Bennett said.

"Out of 51 states, B.C. would end up about 46th down on the list, economically."

In a brief speech followed by a question and answer session, Bennett told the 800 students they have great opportunities ahead for employment, particularly in the new technologies.

But he agreed summer jobs are scarce and said the students will have to hustle to get them.

In response to other questions, Bennett said:

A fixed link between Vancouver Island and the mainland is still just an "exciting proposal."

It is better to boycott the Moscow Olympics than find ourselves involved in a war.

Beer prices have gone up because of increased production costs, but, he added, he's more concerned about the cost of groceries.

Boy Scout merit medal

The president of the Greater Victoria Region of the Boy Scouts was presented with the Medal of Merit Monday at the region's annual meeting.

The presentation was made to Doug Lewis by Lieut.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving, patron Scout for B.C.

The award, one of Scouting's highest honors, was given to Lewis for outstanding, faithful and effective service to the youth organization.

Lewis, who was re-elected president, told the meeting the numbers of young people involved in Scouting in the Greater Victoria area has soared from about 1,700 to more than 1,900 in the past year.

Iraqi assassins stalk Ghotbzadeh

Times News Services

KUWAIT — A hail of bullets fired from at least two cars hit a motorcade carrying Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh today, but no one was hurt, the Kuwait news agency reported.

Iran blamed Iraq for what it described as an abortive assassination attempt.

Meanwhile, Tehran radio said two U.S. fighter planes fired on an Iranian patrol aircraft over the Gulf of Oman today but were chased off by Iranian fighters. The U.S. said two F-14 fighters intercepted an Iranian transport plane over the strategic Straits of Hormuz and escorted it back to Iranian air space, but did not fire on it.

It was also reported that Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr has asked Cuban President Fidel Castro to convene an extraordinary meeting of nonaligned countries to deal with the latest American "aggression" against Iran.

Tke Kuwait interior ministry said police located two cars used in today's attack on Ghotbzadeh, but made no mention of any arrests. It said the cars were filled with weapons and explosives.

The official Iranian Pars news agency said the second car was found outside the Iraqi embassy in Kuwait and said "the passengers of the car left the vehicle and entered the Iraqi embassy there."

Pars said one Kuwaiti security agent was slightly wounded in the attack. It also said police had picked up two suspects and recovered 20 guns and that Kuwait had closed its airport and borders.

As the Tehran hostage crisis neared the end of its sixth month, Ghotbzadeh was visiting several Middle East countries in an attempt to improve the Iranian revolutionary regime's relations with Arab governments.

The governments of Kuwait and the other monarchies of the Arabian Peninsula as well as Iraq's socialist government are all worried by the attempts of Iran's revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini and his associates to export their Islamic revolution.

Reacting to the Iranian version of the fighter plane incident, U.S. officials said what they termed a "routine intercept" occurred when an Iranian C-130 flew within 50 nautical miles of the U.S. aircraft carrier Nimitz, on patrol in the

Muskie tipped as successor to Vance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today said he will nominate Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine to succeed Cyrus Vance as U.S. state secretary, congressional sources said.

Muskie, 66, was Hubert Humphrey's vice-presidential running mate in 1968 and lost his own bid for the presidency in 1972.

Every cranny overflows with garbage in this apartment

Garbage hobby kept her in dumps

VANCOUVER (CP) — Some people collect stamps, others collect coins or baseball cards.

But a 30-year-old Vancouver woman had a different hobby. She collected garbage and stored it in her one-bedroom apartment.

The woman, described by neighbors as friendly and courteous, vacated her apartment before March, 1980, without giving notice, leaving behind 140 to 180 cubic metres of garbage.

The garbage, mostly in plastic bags of assorted sizes and colors, is piled almost two metres high in some parts of the 70-square-metre apartment.

Every nook, cranny and shelf is loaded with refuse. In the kitchen, garbage is waist high and the refrigerator is iced shut. Every cupboard is crammed with junk.

Garbage covers the furniture in the living room and bedrooms. The property manager says a television, sofa and a table or two are "under all that."

There also are unopened parcels and letters. One, sent by the former tenant to herself from the U.S., contains empty soft drink containers, according to the customs label.

She even abandoned an old car in the basement of the 52-unit apartment house. The car will be towed away to a storage compound and held for 90 days. If it isn't claimed it will be sold and applied to the costs of cleaning the apartment.

Ron Harvie, property manager for the Rental Housing Council of B.C., says he's never seen anything like it before.

"It's quite unbelievable as you take a look at this place," he says, standing on a one-metre stack of newspapers in the apartment's small hallway.

It will take four or five trips to the city dump to empty the apartment, says Ken Malaniuk, manager of Superior Sanitation Services, the company hired to do the cleanup.

"It will cost upwards of $3,000 by the time we clear this stuff out, store what furniture there is, and make it habitable again," he says.

Every bag will be opened and checked for valuables, Harvie says.

The garbage, most of it clean though musty smelling, has brought rodents into the suite and the rest of the building.

"We'll have to fumigate the entire building and keep a check on it for some time to come," says Harvie.

The woman tenant had a respectable job in Vancouver but left the apartment, in which she had lived since 1973, and headed for the United States sometime before March, says Harvie.

She was contacted by the housing council when the March rent was not paid, Harvie says, and because of the condition of the suite was given notice to vacate.

The suite now is closed by the fire department as a fire hazard.

BCRIC earnings $13.5M

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Resources Investment Corp. has reported consolidated net earnings in the first three months of 1980 of $13.5 million — more than double net earnings of $6.1 million in the first quarter of last year.

BCRIC president David Helliwell said Monday, however, that the figures are not directly comparable because the company in the first quarter last year was a tax-exempt government-owned corporation and had not received funds from its public share issue.

The corporation said in a news release that total revenues in the first quarter this year were $110.4 million, compared with $72.6 million in the corresponding period of 1979.

Helliwell also said that BCRIC won't exercise an option to purchase a 25-percent interest in Kaiser Resources Ltd. because BCRIC negotiated the option with a view to obtaining a direct participation in the coal industry that would fit in with its plans to achieve operating-company status.

He said this particular investment did not meet that criteria.

The option proposal, announced early in March, had been criticized widely and some market observers thought it to be largely responsible for a sharp decline in the value of BCRIC shares in recent weeks.

Helliwell said BCRIC completed its purchase of a 14.25-per-cent interest in MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. at a cost of $106 million.

Did taxpayers foot bill for Socred poll? — NDP

By JAKE BANKY

The NDP refuses to believe Socred assurances that a government payment of $2,500 to a prominent polling firm had nothing to do with politics and was a legitimate government expense.

The payment was made to Goldfarb Consultants of Toronto for work done in August and September of 1978 and the invoice appears in the recently-released 1978-79 public accounts.

Attached to the invoice was a note from a member of the comptroller-general's staff which states:

"We lack sufficient detail to properly audit this account. I refer this for info since this area is politically sensitive."

Another notation said the work was of a confidential nature and further information could be had from David Brown, then communications planning adviser in Premier Bill Bennett's office.

Goldfarb did a total of $259,630 worth of work for the provincial government in 1978-79 but the opposition picked on this specific invoice because of the references to it being politically sensitive and involving confidential matters.

The the time of the invoice coincides approximately with a Goldfarb poll conducted for the Socreds to help them decide whether to call an election that fall.

The poll results were disappointing and the election was put off until the following spring.

As the 17th day of debate on the premier's estimates opened Monday, the opposition demanded to know the nature of the work covered by the invoice.

Most questioners steered clear of making accusations.

NDP leader Dave Barrett suggested it might have covered work done in preparation for a poll.

But his colleague, Eileen Dailly, flatly called it a question of political morality and charged the Bennett government with using public money to finance a political poll.

Bennett denied any misuse of government funds for political purposes and

Alfred Hitchcock dies

Times News Services

HITCHCOCK

LOS ANGELES — Film director Alfred Hitchcock, the rotund master of suspense who successfully mixed murder with laughter and gore, died this morning at his Los Angeles home. He was 80.

Hitchcock's agent, Herman Citron, said he had received the news in a telephone call from Sir Alfred's daughter, Patricia O'Connell, in Los Angeles, where Sir Alfred lived.

Citron said he did not know any of the the details surrounding the death of the man whose 60 films included such hits as Psycho.

Other sources reported the movie giant died at 9:17 a.m. of natural causes — and that, in addition to his daughter, his wife, Alma, and his three grandchildren were at his side.

Sir Alfred, who was born in Leytonstone, Eng., had a heart condition and suffered painful bouts of arthritis in recent years, forcing him to use a wheelchair or crutches.

School trustees back broader sex ed program

By AB KENT

A sex education program that goes beyond the popular concept of instruction and counselling was endorsed Monday by Greater Victoria school trustees.

After lengthy discussion the board passed Trustee Mark Fisher's motion directing the administrators to draw up a package of course material aimed at Grades 8-11 dealing with human sexuality.

The proposal expands by one year the grades now given a limited amounted of instruction.

It also requires trustees, parents, teachers and the education ministry to contribute to development of the course material.

Only Trustee Lavinia Greenwood opposed the motion, although Trustee Win Mott attempted to alter it by extensive amendment which changed the intent and was then refused by chairman Carol Pickup. Trustee Peter Yorke was absent.

Fisher said earlier he was concerned about the rate of teenaged pregnancy which he suggested constitutes a major public health problem, not to mention a serious factor in emotional and psychological well-being of girls who deliver, miscarry or are aborted.

He said his proposal was not intended to be pro-life or pro-abortion, but to make available a continuity of information, "to provide children with a much better idea of themselves, of puberty and sexuality."

Fisher was especially concerned about male students, the forgotten ones when attention focuses on a pregnant girl.

"Sexuality involves responsibility," he said.

The material would not have cultural or religious connotations, "just an intelligent learning process to arm them to deal with the problems of this age."

He added it might include birth control.

A child who asks a teacher a question or who has problem dealing with sexuality should not have to be referred to a counsellor or the family life teacher with whom he may not feel free to discuss it. The teacher should be able to handle it straightaway, Fisher suggested.

Mott said his amendment would take into account some of the family life education going on now in the district and request a report on what further resources would be needed to improve the curriculum.

Fisher said the amendment was a complete distortion of the motion and urged trustees to vote against the motion if they didn't like it the way it was.

Pickup asked administrators what is done in the area at present.

The district employs two teachers who give from two to three hours a year instruction to classes in Grades 8-10. The ministry is seeking a consultant on health, guidance and physical education, which it is felt is not well done in the district.

In addition, trustees were told, a subcommittee to a ministerial youth committee is looking into teenaged pregnancies.

Fisher said it is absurd to think that two teachers making themselves available to students for a few hours a year could be a successful program.

Trustees have failed, he said, if teachers are not

MP blasts Sen. Perrault for butting in

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Ray Perrault, one of three senators in the cabinet, is using taxpayers' money for partisan activities in British Columbia and interfering with the work of elected MPs, a New Democratic Party MP said Monday.

Jim Fulton, who represents Skeena riding in northwestern B.C., demanded in the Commons that Perrault "confine his activities to those normally reserved for members of the upper chamber" and that the government release each month the expenses of the senator and his staff.

Fulton said outside the Commons that Perrault, government House leader in the Senate and the only B.C. representative in the cabinet, has hired a partisan staff and is trying to gain credit for the work of other ministers while usurping the role of elected MPs.

It is not unusual for cabinet ministers to hire a partisan staff but Perrault has "no electoral responsibility" and perhaps has overstepped the rights of a senator, he suggested.

Fulton referred to a recent news release on aid from the department of regional economic expansion to a lumber mill in McBride, B.C., which says Perrault made the announcement on behalf of Pierre De Bane, minister responsible for the department.

Fulton said major announcements should be made by the cabinet minister involved.

"But I think if the minister is not making it, either someone from his department or the local MP should make it.

"Rather than have constituents deal with their elected representatives, the Liberals are trying to give the impression there is an alternative."

Perrault also has made statements on the proposed grain terminal at Prince Rupert in Fulton's riding, sometimes contradicting what Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin has said, the MP added.

Perrault, who was appointed to the cabinet after the Liberals were shut out in B.C. in the Feb. 18 election, was in Vancouver and could not be reached for comment.

Jackpot winner collects again

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A persistent gambler who recently won the world's largest jackpot in Reno has taken a one-armed bandit for at least another $44,000.

Bill Ragland, who won $314,741 at Harold's Casino on April 8, collected $12,000 Monday after earlier wins of $24,000 and $8,000 during 17 days of continuous play at a slot machine at Binion's Horseshoe Casino, owner Ted Binion said.

The Fresno, Calif., man, his sister and daughter took turns playing the same slot machine "continuously, 24 hours a day," casino publicist Lynn White said.

"Crazy people," she said. "They look like hell."

They walked into the casino two weeks ago with $100, she said, and just kept playing their winnings.

Lava eruption fears raised

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A 1½-kilometre-wide slab on the north face of Mount St. Helens has bulged five to eight metres in a few days, increasing the odds of devastating avalanches from the volcano, scientists say.

And while scientists from the U.S. Geological Survey are cautious about interpreting measurements taken in the last few days, they add that the recent changes also may forecast a violent lava eruption.

Meanwhile, seismologists at the University of Washington reported the mountain was again shaken by strong quakes and state officials in Olympia considered closing areas near the southwest Washington peak to property owners.

Bob Christiansen, a geophysicist from the geological survey, said Monday the slab around the Goat Rock area near the 2,285-metre level of the 2,950-metre peak has moved 60 metres to the north-northwest in the last year.

"As much as 15 to 25 feet of displacement has occurred between Thursday and Sunday," he said.

Besides the bulging, Christiansen said instruments have recorded increasing tilt to the north or northwest during the last several days.

Bulging and tilting shows that the rock "is unstable and moving outwards," said volcanologist David Johnson.

Temple defaced

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The Prince George Sikh Association has offered a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction of vandals who have defaced their temple with racist slogans.

"This act is a violation of our religious and cultural freedoms and we're not going to put up with this any longer," Charanjit Singh Sandhu, president of the 1,500-member association, said Monday.

The racial slurs and obscenities were painted on all sides of the temple by vandals using bright green and pink spray paint.

Sandhu said the association has complained to the RCMP 10 times during the year about other acts of vandalism but police have done nothing.

He said the temple's windows and fences have been broken, cars in the parking lot were smashed and the symbol on top of the building was taken off.

Agents and criminals among Cuban exiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI Director William Webster says bureau agents have discovered a small number of intelligence agents, criminals and prostitutes among the Cuban refugees flooding into Florida.

Webster, in an interview with the Washington Post Monday, said a team of FBI agents has been screening the refugees who were offered a chance to flee Cuba in the past week by Fidel Castro.

Asked if there were any intelligence operatives among the more than 3,000 confirmed arrivals so far on a flotilla of refugee boats, Webster said, "So far, it's been pretty small, but we have confirmed some."

He also was quoted as saying Castro "appears to be pre-empting a certain percentage of the available seats on those boats for people he doesn't want in Cuba anymore."

Verne Jervis, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, told UPI he knew of about a dozen Cubans "being held in the Federal Corrections Institute in Florida."

"They are people who would appear to be excludable under immigration laws, either because of criminal convictions or prostitution," Jervis said. But he said he knew of no spies or terrorists being held at the prison.

Webster was quoted as saying FBI agents, who are working with other intelligence agencies in screening the new arrivals, "have certain profiles we're looking for."

Meanwhile, in the calm following a storm, 50 small boats left today for Cuba, resuming the Freedom Flotilla that has brought about 3,500 refugees to the United States in the past week.

Despite the deaths of two exiles during a small hurricane Sunday, boat captains took advantage of the break in the weather and set out on the 145-kilometres journey across the treacherous Florida Straits to the Cuban port of Mariel.

One captain said the boaters planned to stay together to prevent a repeat of Sunday's havoc that saw boats scattered through the straits and the Coast Guard deluged with distress calls.

Meanwhile, Radio Havana, quoting the Communist Party newspaper Granma, said more than 1,700 boats were in Mariel harbor, waiting for the break in the weather to load refugees.

The broadcast, monitored in Miami, said no boats had were allowed to leave the harbor during the stormy weather conditions.

On Monday, Florida Gov. Bob Graham declared a state of emergency in counties struggling to handle the influx of refugees.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service dispatched 100 more border patrol agents to deal with the sealift and customs agents seized three shrimp boats Monday, imposing heavy fines on the owners who brought 507 illegal aliens into the United States.

For the first time since the ragtag boatlift began eight days ago, there were no arrivals from Cuba on Monday following a storm with hurricane-force winds that pummelled the 145-kilometre straits between Florida and Cuba.

Despite choppy seas, however, about 100 small craft put out for the Cuban port of Mariel to join 1,500 boats already waiting to take on refugees. The weather was expected to improve today.

Walkout cuts liquor and beer shipments

VANCOUVER (CP) — Beer and liquor shipments destined for various B.C. liquor outlets, restaurants and pubs were halted temporarily Monday by a surprise walkout of more than 200 employees of the province's central liquor distribution branch.

It was the second walkout in as many weeks by members of the B.C. Government Employees Union protesting the use of non-union contractors for work at the warehouse.

Operations returned to normal when afternoon shift employees arrived for work.

Union spokesman Jack Adams said government officials say the non-union contract work is government policy.

Union officials refused to say if further walkouts will occur.

3 major banks cut mortgage interest rates

TORONTO (CP) — Three of Canada's major banks announced Monday reductions in their mortgage rates, effective today.

The reductions, in response to declining costs of borrowing in money markets, varied among the banks and mortgage rates among the Big Five banks now differ by as much as three-quarters of one per cent.

The Toronto Dominion Bank said it cut its one-year rate to 15.75 per cent from 16.25 per cent and its three-year rate to 16 per cent from 16.5 per cent.

The renewal rate for five-year mortgages has been reduced to 16.75 per cent from 17 per cent. The Toronto Dominion Bank is not taking new five-year mortgages.

Bank spokesman Arnold Agnew said it is not possible to say whether mortgage rates will hold or continue to decline.

"It is going to be rather fluid for a while," he said. "A lot of external forces are at work."

The Royal Bank of Canada said its one-year mortgage rate remains unchanged at 16 per cent but its three-year rate has dropped to 16.5 per cent from 17.5 per cent and the five-year rate to 16.75 per cent from 17.75 per cent.

The Bank of Montreal has lowered its rate for mortgages of one, two and three years to 15.75 per cent. Previous rates were 16.25 per cent for one year, 16.5 per cent for two years and 17 per cent for three years.

The five-year rate has been cut by 1.5 per cent to 16 per cent.

The Bank of Nova Scotia announced last Wednesday it had lowered its one- and three-year rates to 15.75 per cent and its five-year rate to 16 per cent.

The latter rate is the lowest among the major banks for five-year mortgages. A spokesman said the rates are constantly under review.

A spokesman for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said rate changes are under consideration but for the moment, the rates stand at 16.25 per cent for new one- and three-year mortgages, with a reduction of one-half of one per cent for renewals, and 16.75 per cent for five years.

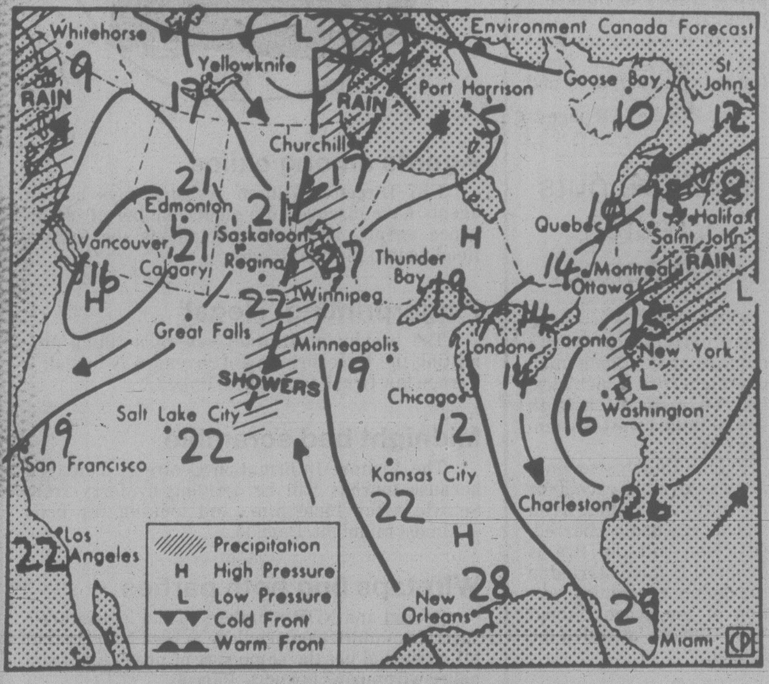

Map valid until noon Wednesday

Cloud that covered the Georgia Strait area overnight is rapidly thinning and moving east as a ridge of high pressure builds in from the west. The gradual clearing trend is forecast to continue across the south as the ridge continues to press eastwards. However at the same time a disturbance crossing the northeast Pacific spread cloud and more rain to the north and central coasts later today. The ragged southern cloud edge of this disturbance will at times poke down into southern regions as well.

said information on the invoice must wait for the estimates of Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe, Brown's new boss.

Wolfe, however, called reporters together to explain that the invoice was for consultation on evaluating government information programs.

"There is no political aspect to this," said Wolfe.

He suggested the civil servant who was worried about political sensitivity was probably confused by Goldfarb's reputation as a pollster.

Brown offered the same explanation.

"It's a personal reaction by one bureaucrat. He saw 'Goldfarb' and he immediately thought 'poll'."

Although he could not recall specifically the work covered by the $2,500 invoice, he said it was connected to research on government communications.

"There is absolutely no truth to the inference that it had anything to do with polling or politics."

Asbestos products banned

OTTAWA (UPC) — The federal government has banned building construction products containing asbestos fibres, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet announced today.

"Inhalation of asbestos fibre has been shown to be a human health hazard which can result in cancer, and the ban is in line with our policy to reduce unnecessary exposure to airborne asbestos," Ouellet said.

The ban, enforced under the Hazardous Products Act, prohibits the importation, advertisement and sale of drywall joint cements and patching and spackling compounds that contain asbestos fibre.

The new legislation also applies to asbestos-based artificial ash manufactured for use in sand-pan gas fireplaces.

Existing joint cements and patching compounds in buildings are not dangerous.

Government officials and representatives from industry consulted several times while the legislation was being drafted.

"Prior to the ban very few of the products in the marketplace contained asbestos, as manufacturers in general modified their formulations to remove asbestos fibre," Ouellet said.

Departmental officials will monitor manufacturers to ensure the act is honored.

"In this way, Canadians will be able to purchase or use products for construction, renovation and home repair that will not give rise to airborne asbestos fibres during installation or later alterations," he said.

Ouellet urged consumers to throw out artificial ash that is two years old. Older material may release asbestos if disturbed.

Edwin Stephenson . . . oh what the magic wand could do for Bastion at St. Ann's!

Bastion man takes off on financial fantasies

By PAUL MINVIELLE

There was a distant look in Edwin Stephenson's eyes as he gazed out his office window overlooking the busy Inner Harbor.

Stephenson, Bastion Theatre's artistic director, had been asked to think about his organization's future: a fearless forecast with no financial limitations, absolute pie-in-the-sky.

A slight smile creased his face as he momentarily forgot Bastion's current dire financial straits.

"If only I had a magic wand," he said.

Then he launched into his magical vision of Bastion's tomorrows.

Stephenson's first order of business would be to expand the youth touring company to two or even three companies.

"And they could have their own permanent director," Stephenson said.

Bastion already has Victoria playwright Jeremy Young at work on a new show called I Knew It Yesterday for senior students for next season.

"Some of the places we visit could take two shows," Stehpenson said.

Also in the works for younger students is an hour-long show, The Ice Wolf. Young is adapting the seven-character play to a cast of four to accommodate the company's staffing limitations.

Some of Bastion's future is already in the works.

"Next year we're going on tour with one of our main stage productions, The Importance of Being Earnest," Stephenson said.

He'd like to take all of Bastion's main stage productions on the road.

In many remote communities up-Island and in the Interior, most adults in town turn out for the touring company's presentations for senior students.

"Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could take these larger productions to them?" Stephenson asked. "I'd like to make this company the touring company in the province."

The effervescent director would also like to see another small touring company that could do special little programs for shut-ins and hospitals.

Stephenson bubbled with repressed excitement.

"A summer season would be nice to launch, but it's not our mandate," he said, explaining that the federal, provincial and municipal grants the theatre groups now gets don't cover summer stock.

Stephenson then outlined some of the problems Bastion faces with scheduling at the McPherson Playhouse. He wishes the runs on main stage plays could be longer, and other facilities — office space, rehearsal halls, props, the group's ever-popular theatre school — are scattered around town.

"It's a community theatre. We'd save a bit of money if we could play longer."

Then, with a sly smile, Stephenson sprung the big dream for Bastion's future: "We need our own building, of course!"

Would that be the ultimate for Bastion?

Not quite.

"We could always present live theatre via television satellite to remote locations," Stephenson declared, beaming. "That would be the next step. That would be perfect."

"It wouldn't be difficult to adapt for TV. How wonderful for the actors, the extra money and exposure."

Stephenson foresees the day when scripts are written especially for British Columbians or Victorians.

He also envisions a Victoria theatre so lively they'd be bringing in trainloads of patrons on special theatre excursions from up-Island.

"They could have a hostess on board and box lunches. Get them here for a matinee and have them home that night."

"People are already coming from Port Alberni for our performances."

Bastion's financial situation is tight. While Stephenson is optimistic, he concedes things aren't good.

"We've got to get money or there won't be a future for Bastion," he said.

"Some of these predictions presuppose a facility of our own though."

And where might that be?

Why, the grounds of St. Ann's Academy would be just perfect, Stephenson argues, and he argues convincingly.

A new facility on the grounds there would include a theatre, box office, offices, rehearsal halls, even babysitting facilities.

Anybody have a spare $6 million?

Stephenson needs it to buy a more powerful magic wand.

TOWN TALK

F.M. Rattenbury's, the restaurant in the Crystal Garden, is being readied for opening in May or June.

But a small sign posted on its door claims the delay is upholding tradition.

Says the sign: "F.M. Rattenbury never opened anything on time" and asks the public to be patient.

Meanwhile, Elizabeth Johnson, a management consultant working for the restaurant, says people ask why the restaurant is named after Rattenbury when Percy James, a lesser known Victoria architect of the time, did most of the work.

Aside from the fact that F.M. Rattenbury's sounds better than P.L. James', Rattenbury did come up with the basic design of the structure complete with glass roof although James made Rattenbury's idea workable.

The restaurant doesn't ignore James entirely — it features his picture on its logo beside Rattenbury's.

The province lost a skilled artisan with the death in a James Bay fire last week of David Murdoch.

Murdoch, 59, had worked for the provincial government since 1962 doing innumerable detailed and ornate wood carving jobs including the map of the province featured in the foyer of the Provincial Museum.

The map is thought to be the only one of its kind in the world. Murdoch, with assistance from a variety of government departments, created the map from a single slab of spruce.

The details of the land are all in proportion and even the the curvature of the slab represents the curvature of the earth.

Murdoch also carved items such as violins and guitars.

The B.C. Police Commission has produced a handy brochure on action citizens can take in registering complaints against police forces in the province.

The one-page brochure outlines in simply form the complaint procedures as contained in the B.C. Police Act passed by the legislature in 1975.

It says that if a person has a complaint against a policeman the first step is to go to police headquarters and talk to the complaints officer who will investigate and try to settle the matter. It is informal, quick and, in 90 per cent of the cases, results in a satisfactory resolution of the problem.

If the person is not satisfied he may then make a formal written complaint which the police chief or his delegate will investigate.

If the person is still not satisfied he may demand a public hearing by the police board.

Oak Bay High School alumni may be able to down a drink at the school's 75th anniversary reunion on May 30-June 1 but they're going to have to step outside to puff on a cigarette.

Peter Bunn, chairman of Oak Bay's fire committee, said Monday the law is the law and cannot be bent.

While not an Oak Bay graduate himself, Bunn's children are.

A month ago Victoria school trustees voted to amend a long-standing policy banning liquor from school property at the request of the reunion organizers.

The reunion is expected to draw thousands of former students and staff.

Oak Bay council will give reunion organizers a $1,000 grant to help pay for the organization of an archives for the school.

Two Greater Victoria students turned out to be top talkers in the B.C. public speaking championships held at the Uplands Golf Club on the weekend.

Arbutus Grade 8 student Peter Murray, 13, took high school honors while View Royal student Shannon Patterson, 11, topped the elementary entrants.

The contest was sponsored by the Optimist and Toastmaster Clubs of Victoria.

Q. Can you tell me who wrote the Helen and Warren stories that appeared in the weekend section of the Winnipeg Free Press in the 1920s and are they in print anywhere today? A.N.

A. This information is probably available at the Winnipeg Free Press. The address is 300 Carlton Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba, R3C 3C1.

Midnight bed madness

Ferry schedule knocked

The Visitors Information Centre was dismayed today to learn tourists will be arriving from Seattle after 10:30 p.m. in the summer schedule.

Allowing 30 minutes to clear customs, this means upwards of 850 people will be looking for rooms after 11 p.m.

"This schedule is not the best," said Rita Wilson, who is running an Overflow Housing program for the VIC.

"It means it will be almost midnight in some cases before these tourists find a bed."

If hotels are full, tourists will be directed to private homes where citizens have volunteered to receive guests for a fee. University dorms may also be available.

At the same time, the B.C. Steamship Co. announced it would accept payment in Canadian funds in Victoria for travel on the Victoria Princess ferry (formerly Queen of Prince Rupert) and for the jetfoil.

The fare will be $15 one way for the ferry, $25 for the jetfoil. Passengers can pay in Canadian funds in Victoria but must pay in U.S. funds in Seattle.

The announcement means Victorians save about $3.75 on a one-way jetfoil ticket because they will not have to pay the exchange rate.

Americans will also be able to buy a ticket in Victoria for $25 Canadian, a saving of $3.75, but they will have had to buy a ticket at U.S. rates in Seattle to get here.

Meanwhile, the VIC will face additional costs to keep its Causeway bureau open after 11 p.m. all summer.

The provincial ministry of tourism has agreed to meet some of the additional cost by supplying two employees to help on the late shift.

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce vice-president Bill Anderson said the schedule is not as bad as he had feared.

"We had been worried that the last trip might arrive as late as midnight."

He said he was confident Victorians would find a way to deal with the late arrivals.

Mrs. Wilson said passengers on the late voyage would be asked on board if they need hotel reservations and this information will be telephoned ahead so the VIC will be ready for the tourists with hotel rooms or beds in private homes.

The schedule:

In the shoulder months, from May 16 to June 22, and from Sept. 2 to Oct. 6, the ferry will be leave Seattle at 7:30 a.m., arrive Victoria noon. Leave Victoria 6 p.m., arrive Seattle 10:30 p.m. In the summer months from June 23 to Sept. 1, there will be in addition a trip from Victoria at 12:30 p.m., arriving in Seattle at 5 p.m. and one leaving Seattle at 6 p.m., arriving in Victoria at 10:30 p.m. Then the ferry will leave Victoria at 11 p.m. for an overnight trip to Seattle, arriving at 6 a.m. There will be stateroom space.

The jetfoil:

In the shoulder months it leaves Seattle at 6 a.m., arrives Victoria at 8 a.m., leaves Victoria 8:30 a.m., arrives Seattle at 10:30 a.m. Leaves Seattle at 4 p.m., arriving here at 6 p.m. It leaves Victoria at 6:30 p.m., arriving Seattle at 8:30 p.m.

There is an extra midday sailing on the jetfoil in the peak summer period.

Brakes sought on trail bikes

Trail bikers joyriding along municipal pathways may find their activities regulated by the government if Saanich council gets its way.

Council decided Monday to ask the provincial transport ministry to develop a licensing system for trailbikes to control mounting problems.

Municipal staff told aldermen the bikers are creating a disturbance on Colquitz Creek, Cadboro Bay and Cordova Bay paths.

Obstacles to prevent bikers from using paths are one option suggested by municipal administrator William Tremayne in a report.

He also recommends asking the public to call police when bikers are spotted on walkways.

But Ald. Irene Block said police already have their hands full policing beach parties.

And Eric Robinson, 5024 Wesley, said police are not overly concerned about catching the offending bikers because the courts treat them lightly.

St. Margaret's pioneer days

A spring fair with a pioneer days theme will be held at St. Margaret's School, 1080 Lucas Avenue May 3 from 3 to 7 p.m.

The event will feature panning for gold, a grand auction from 4 to 5 p.m. and a puppet show.

Colwood man stabbed

A 31-year-old Colwood man is in critical condition in Victoria General Hospital after being stabbed Monday in what police describe as a domestic dispute.

Colwood RCMP said Toby Willie was stabbed at least three times in the chest and the abdomen at his home at 7-497 Island Highway about 7:30 p.m.

A 42-year-old woman was arrested at the scene and is in custody. Charges are expected to be laid.

Willie was operated on late Monday and is now in the intensive care unit.

May 22 meet on Tillicum

Saanich council Monday voted unanimously to hold a public information meeting May 22 to discuss the controversial Tillicum shopping centre with residents.

A number of impact studies on the new plan for a 495,000-square-foot complex will be prepared by municipal staff and shown along with a presentation from developers Cal Investments Ltd.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the municipal hall on Vernon.

At an emergency meeting last Thursday council dropped plans for a public meeting and impact studies in order to quickly lift a restrictive covenant limiting the size of the centre to 295,000 square feet.

A Capital Region District move last Wednesday to prepare a bylaw that would make it impossible for Saanich to remove the covenant persuaded a majority of aldermen to lift it immediately.

But aldermen are convinced a public meeting to let Saanich residents know what's going on is a good idea.

Cal Investments last week offered to arrange and pay for a public meeting.

The company is preparing a traffic report for the meeting and reports will be submitted from the police and fire departments.

Finders of Tory bugs admit planting them

OTTAWA (CP) — William Sandiford and Daniel McGarry, partners in an electronics security firm, pleaded guilty in county court Monday to public mischief in connection with the bugging of Progressive Conservative party offices on Parliament Hill in 1977.

McGarry also pleaded guilty to attempting to defraud the Conservative party. A charge of fraud against Sandiford was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Charges of possession of illegal electronic listening devices against both men were also dismissed.

McGarry and Sandiford were charged after they found an electronic bugging device in an armchair in the office of Conservative MP Elmer MacKay and another suspicious object in a telephone in the office of Joe Clark, then Opposition leader.

MacKay stunned the Commons Oct. 31 when he announced the listening device had been found in his office. Later the same day a device was found in Clark's office and MacKay speculated that the RCMP security service had been responsible for the buggings.

Testimony Monday showed Sandiford and McGarry were alone when they discovered the devices; it was impossible to detect the bug in MacKay's office in the way Sandiford and McGarry said they did, and the device in Clark's office did not work when it was discovered, as they claimed.

Their firm, Uniserv Sound and Signal Inc. of Toronto, billed the Conservative party $13,616.95 for services rendered, but reduced the bill to $3,184.80 after the party disputed some of the charges.

S-Sgt. Dan McFaul, an Ottawa police officer who conducted a two-year investigation of the case, told the court McGarry and Sandiford swept MacKay's office at MacKay's request.

Mackay was attending daily question period in the Commons when they arrived to do the search but his secretary, Josephine Cleall, permitted them to enter MacKay's private office. Sandiford and McGarry were in the office alone with the door closed for about 10 minutes, he said.

They then called in Mrs. Cleall and showed her an armchair with a one-inch slit under the seat. She watched as they enlarged the slit with a pair of scissors and removed the device.

The almost new battery in the device was found later to have been used for no more than six hours, McFaul said.

And, although Sandiford told police he detected the device with a spectrum monitor from a distance of six feet, police were not able to do so later during tests.

Later in the day, Sandiford and McGarry searched Clark's office. They found a "top hat diode" connected to the telephone receiver in Clark's office, again while alone in the room, McFaul testified.

Photographs were taken of the "top hat diode" the night it was discovered. Those photographs show the telephone had normal wiring at that time and was not capable of picking up conversations in the board room, McFaul said.

BREW FOR THE CREW is mighty important to the men of HMNZS Otago, a New Zealand ship in Vancouver prior to Pacific naval exercises. While Otago may run on costly diesel fuel, its sailors need a different kind of liquid gold to keep them going and they'd hate to see any of it go missing. To that end, Able Seaman Hopgood was posted to keep an eye on the navy's suds.

18 injured in gas blast

EDMONTON (CP) — A natural gas leak caused an explosion in downtown Edmonton Monday which sent 18 persons to hospital.

Bill Bissett, department public relations officer, said six persons, including five Edmonton firefighters, are in satisfactory condition. He said the explosion injured more firemen than have been hurt in a single incident in the city in the last 30 years.

Bissett said the gas leak was caused by three plumbers working in the basement of the building. They were tapping into a main gas line but "they blew it," he said. When the job was complete, they found they could not shut off the flow.

Bissett said a spark from a drill they were using caused a small initial explosion, injuring the plumbers slightly. In the subsequent commotion, they knocked off a sprinkler head which alerted firefighters.

Bissett said the firefighters arrived at the three-storey, brick building at 11:25 a.m. The second, larger explosion occurred just after they entered the basement.

This one came after natural gas filled the boiler room and was ignited by a pilot light in the boiler.

"It sounded like an earthquake," said Bill Boston of Boston and Associates, one of the tenants on the third floor of the building.

It was initially believed the plumbers were trapped in the explosion and firemen searched the debris for two hours before concluding they had escaped.

It was later discovered the three had gone to hospital for treatment. They were later released.

Hunt can cash oil for debts

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (UPC) — Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt can go ahead with plans to turn over a substantial share of Beaufort Sea oil and gas leases to pay a large silver futures debt, a N.W.T. Supreme Court judge ruled Monday.

Judge Calvin Tallis ruled Hunt could proceed with a deal with Engelhard Minerals and Chemicals Corp. of New York. The deal which involves transfer of a 20-percent interest, estimated at $300 million, in Hunt's Beaufort holdings has a completion date of April 30, 1980.

The ruling Monday varied an order issued by the court April 1, which effectively froze any transfers of the ownership of Hunt's Beaufort Sea leases. BP had obtained an injunction against the move in order to collect $40 million in damages from Hunt awarded by a British court.

Hunt lawyers Sunday filed affadavit evidence on the value of Hunt's holdings after the transfers are completed. The Texas billionaire has undertaken to retain leases worth enough to meet the terms of the 1979 $40 million judgment awarded BP by a British court.

Second CLC chief resigns over QFL

TORONTO (CP) — Another vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress has resigned in protest against the congress's failure to take action against a violation of its constitution by the Quebec Federation of Labor.

Raymond Gall of Edmonton, Canadian vice-president of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association, said he supports congress president Dennis McDermott on every issue except his failure to crack down on the Quebec federation for giving a haven to unions that have bolted their international labor bodies.

Ken Rose of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers — the only other direct representative of the building trades unions on the congress executive — quit four weeks ago. Both men will boycott the congress convention in Winnipeg next month.

Gall said he recognizes the Quebec situation is a thorny one for McDermott on the eve of the convention and hopes to work out a solution later.

Quebec poll split

MONTREAL (CP) — The latest public opinion poll on the Quebec referendum says pretty much the same as two previous ones — that the yes and no forces are running neck and neck as the May 20 vote nears.

The Gallup poll indicates 38 per cent of 828 Quebecers questioned two weeks ago would vote for giving their provincial government a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association, while 36 per cent were against.

Another 19 per cent were undecided, and seven per cent refused to say how they felt.

Forest fire rages from Alberta into Sask.

EDMONTON (CP) — A forest fire raging out of control in northeastern Alberta had burned about 180,000 acres by Monday, making it one of the largest in recent provincial history.

Jim Skrenek, head of fire control operations for the Alberta Forest Service, said Monday the fire, which started five days ago 190 kilometres north of Fort McMurray, moved into northwestern Saskatchewan on the weekend and covers about 10,000 acres in that province.

He said the largest blaze in Alberta to date covered 235,000 acres south of Slave Lake in 1968.

Skrenek said the latest fire, apparently started by a dry lightning strike, is costing at least $30,000 a day to fight.

The forest service has about 200 men and six helicopters in the area, most involved in maintaining a 32-kilometre fire line along the southeast perimeter.

The fire grew by only 9,000 acres Sunday, down from Saturday's 50,000-acre increase. Skrenek said the decline probably resulted from decreased winds and a move into different types of timber.

There is no estimate available on damage caused by the fire.

"How do you put a dollar value on lost recreation potential and watershed?" Skrenek asked.

There were 71 fires burning in the province Monday, nine of them out of control.

So far this year, said Skrenek, about 270 forest fires have been reported, covering 200,000 acres. To this time last year, 17 fires had been sited covering eight acres.

Ed Stashko, chief meteorologist for the forest service, offered little encouragement that the situation would improve.

He said Monday the province faces the hottest, driest spring and summer it has experienced in the past century.

Stashko said record high temperatures, low humidity and high winds are forecast to continue and will result in critical situations for Alberta's forestry and agriculture industries.

Skrenek said the forest service now has about 800 men on firelines throughout Alberta and another 300 on stand-by. There are also 40 or 50 helicopters and 10 air tankers (water bombers and fire retardant carriers) available.

Although there are about 4,000 trained firefighters in Alberta, most of them natives, no more than about 1,400 should be working at any one time, he said.

A pilot killed Tuesday while water-bombing a fire in Slave Lake has been identified as Taras Kitzul, 54, of Edmonton.

In Saskatchewan, there were between 35 and 40 forest fires burning Monday, said Red Taylor, director of forest fire protection in that province.

Taylor said the Alberta blaze does not appear to be advancing toward Cluff Lake, which had been threatened, alleviating immediate fears of evacuation.
